AGREE ON TARIFF BILL SURRENDER TO TAFT

Final Letter of President Forces on Conferrees His Glove and Lumber Rates.

BILL GOES TO HOUSE TO-DAY

Taft's Eyes Now Opened to the Game Aldrich and Cannon Have Been Playing Against Him.

WASHINGTON, July 29.—President Taft has both won and lost his fight on the Tariff bill. He will get a bill that he will sign, and in that lies his victory. But it will not be a "substantial revision downward," according to his campaign promises, and therein lies his defeat. The victory carries with it, also, the uncomfortable certainty that if he had adopted his battle tactics earlier in the contest he might have had a bill which would have come nearer to conforming to his campaign pledges. For it was only by the adoption of these battle tactics, and the steadfast employment of them, that he has won any victory at all. He knows now that when he set his face firmly for a certain thing, he got it. Not even Aldrich and Cannon, with all their power in the Senate and House, dared to carry a fight with him to the people.

When the President wrote to Chairman Payne of the House conferrees this morning that he would not accept the compromise on lumber and gloves which had been fixed up yesterday afternoon, the Aldrich and Cannon men in the conference sulked a little, and finally retreated, without even a show of gracefulness. To-night the conference report, signed by all the Republicans of both Senate and House, is in the hands of Champ Clark, minority leader of the House, and the Democrats are expected to have their opposition statement to submit in the morning when the report is presented to the House.

That the report has been signed by all the Republicans means, first, that it has the approval of the President, and, second, that it will go through both House and Senate without more than perfunctory opposition. The insurgents in both houses are already fading away. They are talking of the political gravity of voting in opposition to their party on a Tariff bill, and such talk is but the forerunner of the end. There is every prospect now that by the end of next week, and possibly a day sooner, the bill will have been signed and Congress will have adjourned.

Shell in Cannon-Aldrich Camp.

The letter of the President to Mr. Payne was a shell fairly in the centre of the Aldrich-Cannon camp. These two leaders had been playing an extremely crafty game with the President. They had waited until everything else of a controversial nature was out of the way. Hides, apparently the greatest object of contention in all the list, had been the subject of a long-drawn-out struggle, in which the President had shown of what he was capable in the way of determination, and what he could win by it. That matter had been settled his way.

Then Aldrich and Cannon sprung their trap, hoping to catch the President. They agreed to the high House rates on gloves as one side of their compromise, and the high Senate rates on lumber as the other side. For although the Senate differential on dressed lumber is lower than that of the House, the rate on rough lumber was half as high again, and it is rough lumber that forms the bulk of the lumber imports.

The President, however, again showed not only that he could but that he would fight. He was stiffened in that attitude by the action of those members of the House who appealed to him on Tuesday night and told him they would beat the report in the House if it contained any such provisions on lumber. Still striving to gain some advantage for their friend Littauer on the glove schedule Aldrich and Cannon agreed to the bluff compromise of last night, reclassifying gloves and fixing a rate on rough lumber which they knew to be higher than the President had said he would accept. It was after this had been submitted to him, and smilingly negatived, that Payne and McCall went to the White House about midnight, to talk the matter over with the President.

Aldrich had sought him there earlier, expecting to find him anxiously considering the situation and what to do next. But Aldrich had not found him. Instead, the Senator had been informed simply that the President was dining out. Thereupon Aldrich called up Secretary Carpenter. Diplomatically he got the same reply—the President was dining out and would not be back at the White House until about midnight. Perhaps the Senator could see him then if he cared to wait. Something told Aldrich that it would not be worth his while to wait, and he did not. But Payne and McCall did, and when they left the White House, just before 1 o'clock this morning, they had an inkling of what would happen later.

Payne Guards Taft Letter.

The letter to Payne was delivered when the conferrees met, at 10 o'clock. The Democrats had been admitted to the conference for the first time. They were promptly requested to retire and then the letter was read to the Republicans. They have guarded its text most carefully all day, Mr. Payne refusing to let it go out of his possession for a minute, even in the care of one of the conferrees. Any conferee who wanted to read it had to do so under the supervision of Mr. Payne. In general, however, its contents are known. The President referred simply to the questions of lumber and gloves which had been submitted to him yesterday evening. He declared explicitly that he would not accept a higher rate on rough lumber than $1.25 per thousand, and that on gloves he would accept the Senate rates, which, with a single exception—a reduction on the cheapest grade—are the Dingley rates. It was a straight-out declaration and it had its effect immediately. The Aldrich-Cannon crowd accepted the President's ultimatum and after including his figures in the report signed it and again called in the Democrats.

Thus President Taft has won such a victory as it is. It is impossible in advance of the presentation of the full conference report to give a detailed analysis of the bill as it will be when it goes to him for signature, but broadly its provisions are known well enough to warrant certain statements about it. It will be found to contain a greater number of reductions of rates than of increases. Thus, numerically, it is a revision downward. But both in importance and in amount the increases will offset the decreases so that both in importance and

A WOMAN HEAD OF SCHOOLS.

Chicago Board Selects Mrs. E. F. Young for City Superintendency.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, July 29.—Mrs. Ella Flagg Young, Principal of the Chicago Normal School, and one of the best-known educators of the Middle West, will be the new Superintendent of the Chicago public schools. For the first time in the history of Chicago a woman will occupy the Superintendency of public schools.

Mrs. Young was selected by the members of the Chicago Board of Education, sitting as a Committee of the Whole, to-night. The formal election of Mrs. Young to the superintendency will take place to-morrow night at a special meeting of the board, the call for which was issued by President Alfred R. Urion before adjournment to-night.

The unanimous selection of Mrs. Young at the close of a three-hour session, during which six candidates for the place, all Principals of Chicago schools, appeared before the committee and answered questions pertaining to the administration of the schools and the position of Superintendent. The action of the board in unanimously selecting the Chicago woman brought to a close three weeks of caucuses and informal meetings, and was the last important business of the school year.

Mrs. Young's selection followed a struggle for the office, which has been going on since the resignation of Edwin G. Cooley several months ago. At one time the question of Mr. Cooley's successor appeared to foreshadow a split among the members of the board. Many educators from other cities have been urged by their friends.

At its meeting to-night the board also created a new position in the schools, that of assistant to the Superintendent. John D. Shoop, Supervisor of Vacation Schools, was named for the place.

Mrs. Young is 64 years old, and was born in Buffalo, N. Y. She has been engaged in teaching since 1862. She was District Superintendent of Schools for Chicago from 1887 to 1899, and a Professor of Education at the University of Chicago from 1899 to 1905. She has been the editor of The Chicago Bimonthly since 1896, and is the author of several books on educational subjects. An organization of women Principals of Chicago elementary schools is named the Ella F. Young Club.

GRANDMOTHER A LIFE SAVER.

Supported Drowning Granddaughter Until Rescued by Two Girls.

Special to The New York Times.

CORONA, L. I., July 29.—Swimming to the assistance of her granddaughter, Miss Bertha Delomer, 17, of Harbor Terrace, this place, yesterday, Mrs. J. Carlin nearly lost her own life. The girl "lost her head" when her rescuer was at hand and grasped her about the neck. Both were in a dangerous plight when two other girls, both good swimmers, swam to their rescue.

Miss Delomer had swam far out when she was seized with cramp. She screamed for help and her grandmother hastened to her assistance, but the girl clung so closely to her neck as almost to choke the grandmother. Seeing that both were helpless, Miss Ethel Wood and Miss Anna Smith, who were swimming near-by, swam out and managed to drag the two to shore. They were then unconscious.

It required three hours' work by a physician to restore Miss Delomer to consciousness. The grandmother was little the worse for her experience.

MOTORIST'S ILL-TIMED WHIM.

It Will Probably Result in the Death of Passenger He Frightened.

Special to The New York Times.

DOVER, N. J., July 29.—As a result of the whim of an unidentified motorist Vincenzo Compolli this afternoon sustained a fractured skull, which is expected to prove fatal.

Compolli and his brother, who are employed by the traction company, while trudging homeward between Mount Tabor and Denville, hailed a passing automobile with only one occupant and asked for a lift. The driver stopped his car and took the two Italians aboard, and then dashed onward toward Dover at breakneck speed. The man was in a hilarious mood, it is said, and when his passengers shouted to him to stop, as the car approached the street where they live, he put on extra speed.

At the Post Office Vincenzo sprang from the car and struck his head on the trolley track. He was picked up unconscious and taken to the Morristown Hospital.

A block or two further on the automobile driver slowed up and let the other man alight, then was off again before any one got his number.

JESUIT STUDENT DROWNED.

Dunn's Companions Fail to Reach Him with Boat in Time.

Special to The New York Times.

POUGHKEEPSIE, July 29.—A race for a life was rowed by students at St. Andrew's Novitiate, a large Jesuit institution on the banks of the Hudson above Poughkeepsie, shortly before noon to-day, and failed by a narrow margin. In the sight of those who were racing frantically to save him, Joseph Dunn, one of the most popular students in the college, was drowned.

Dunn was a good swimmer, and the cause of the drowning is something of a mystery. He went out in a boat early in the morning and rowed to the middle of the river, where he plunged in for a swim. He was in full sight of the college. On the grounds there were groups of students who noticed him swimming near the boat.

After he had been in the water some time Dunn swam to the boat, which had drifted away from him with the tide. He tried to clamber aboard, but was unable to do so, and called for help. Several of the students who heard him hurried into a boat and pulled desperately toward him. They were only a short distance away when Dunn was seen to release his hold and sink. He did not reappear. It is believed that he was seized with cramps. Efforts to recover his body have thus far been unavailing.

Dunn's home was at Wentworth, Mass. He had been at St. Andrew's-on-the-Hudson for five years.

BURGLAR TRAP KILLS WIFE.

She Had Forgotten That Her Husband Had Rigged Up a Gun Device.

SMITHVILLE, Ga., July 29.—A trap gun Emmett Booker, a merchant, had set for burglars was discharged to-day when Mrs. Booker opened the door of her husband's store. Two charges of buckshot entered her body. Death resulted four hours later.

Mrs. Booker had forgotten that the gun was in the store.

THAW LAYS KILLING TO A "BRAINSTORM"

Also Tells Jerome He Would Avoid One in Future If Set Free.

FRETS UNDER THE HECKLING

Speaks of "Tips" He Gave Counsel at His Trial as "Crazy Things"—Wife's Presence Worries Him.

Special to The New York Times.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., July 29.—Harry Kendall Thaw, in the witness chair, faced District Attorney Jerome again to-day throughout a long, hot afternoon, and as the examination proceeded the slayer of Stanford White, now seeking his freedom on the ground that he is no insane criminal, lost perceptibly much of the calmness and deliberation he had shown while fencing so cleverly with the District Attorney on Wednesday. Jerome fired his questions fast during the first hour of the examination, and gradually Thaw's face flushed and his foot nervously tapped the floor as he answered. His voice grew angry. Sometimes he hesitated. The examination is not finished, either. It will be resumed this morning. Then the prisoner's attorney, Lawyer Morschauser, will have his chance.

The court was packed, as usual, with men and women, who listened intently to Jerome's rasping questions and the increasingly irritated replies of the prisoner. Thaw's anger first became manifest over his questioner's insistence on getting from him an opinion whether he thought this or that alienist who testified for him or for the State was in error when they declared him insane at his former trials for murder or in the habeas corpus proceedings before Justice Morschauser at Poughkeepsie. When Thaw would answer that a certain alienist had believed him sane and when that alienist's report was unfavorable Jerome would read from it testimony to the opposite effect and ask Thaw to reconcile that sworn testimony with what he had just said. That irritated the prisoner unmistakably.

Continually Mr. Jerome referred to Thaw's frequently expressed dislike for Dr. Flint. When not trying to get the witness to state that in his opinion Dr. Flint had testified falsely, the District Attorney would beg Thaw to waive his privilege and allow Dr. Flint, who was one of the alienists retained by Thaw's former attorneys, to be called to the stand to explain the discrepancies that Thaw said existed in his conclusions. But while Thaw would say that he was uncertain whether Flint was truthful or not, Jerome could not get him to call the alienist an out and out falsifier. Meantime Mr. Morschauser interposed a constant fire of objections, without, however, being sustained by Justice Mills in any important instance.

Presently Jerome handed to Thaw some twenty-seven pages of note paper on which were pasted clippings, the margins being full of annotations and parts of letters that had been copied by the prisoner.

Counsel Gives Thaw a Respite.

"Take all the time you want to read them," warned Mr. Morschauser. And Thaw did.

There was one dramatic moment in the afternoon. It was when Jerome handed Thaw a hatpin and asked Thaw if the head of it, which was an amethyst cut in the shape of a dog's head, set with diamonds and pearls, had not originally been the head of a whip. Mrs. Evelyn Nesbit Thaw was in court, and she gazed intently at her husband as he took the article out of the hands of the Clerk of the Court.

Thaw for a moment seemed embarrassed as he took the thing in his hands. Jerome waited, then put his question. Thaw did not answer quickly. When he did he said he thought the thing was a hatpin, and that the head had once been the handle of a parasol belonging to Mrs. Evelyn Nesbit Thaw.

The pin, it was said, was given to Mr. Jerome by young Mrs. Thaw in the afternoon, immediately after she arrived from New York.

"I think," said Thaw, "it was the head of a parasol that I gave my wife."

That ended the hatpin incident, and Mr. Jerome reverted to the introduction of papers, letters, and other documents, most of which Thaw identified as being in his handwriting. The evidence and the report of the commission that was appointed to examine into the sanity of Thaw during one of his murder trials was also identified and put in evidence.

Thaw, accompanied by his mother, entered the courtroom a few minutes before 10 o'clock. He wore the same blue serge suit he did yesterday, his shirt was again a blue négligee, while his tie was a bow of the same color. He wore patent leather shoes, but no jewelry.

His sister, the former Countess of Yarmouth; his brother Josiah, and the latter's wife and the alienists for the relator's side were already in court. He greeted his relatives affectionately, shook the hands of his friends, and smilingly replied to their congratulations upon his deportment on the stand yesterday.

Jerome and Thaw Amicable.

Jerome was also in his place at the head of the array of counsel representing the State, and he and Thaw greeted each other in the friendliest manner. Thaw would lean over toward Jerome, and all in the courtroom could see them laughing at what was said. The conversation between Thaw and the man whom his mother so bitterly referred to in "The Secret Revealed" pamphlet was kept up until Justice Mills called the court to order.

Clifford W. Hartridge, Thaw's counsel of record in his first trial for murder, was in the room in answer to a subpoena of Mr. Morschauser's which ordered him to produce in court the books in which, as Susan Merrill testified on Tuesday, she had kept the records of the money paid to upward of 200 girls who, she said, had been brought to New York by Thaw. Hartridge did not have the books with him, declaring that he had been unable to find them.

The Merrill woman was also in court under a Morschauser subpoena, and followed Hartridge on the stand. She swore that one of the girls that Thaw had whipped in her apartment was a sickly little creature for whom she said she felt so sorry that she remonstrated with Thaw because of his treatment of her. Later when Mr. Morschauser got the witness he made her admit that she had known Stanford White, and that the architect had communicated with her several times about the renting of her apartment. White, she explained, either called at the house or telephoned.

Before Hartridge was called to the

SUDDEN STORM STOPS WRIGHT FROM FLYING

Ten-Mile Test Again Postponed —Early Morning Flight To-day Vetoed.

INCONVENIENT TO OFFICERS

May Be Tried To-morrow, as Time Limit Presses—Morning Weather Conditions Have Been Perfect.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 29.—In the face of a rising storm the Wrights this evening were forced to abandon any attempt at undertaking the ten-mile speed flight which will end the tests for the Government. The machine had been installed on the monorail, the engine had been tested and found working perfectly, and Orville and Lieut. B. D. Foulois were ready to ascend when a telephone message from the Signal Corps officers stationed at the far end of the course conveyed the information that a heavy squall of wind with driving rain was in progress there. Through field glasses the storm was plainly visible from the parade ground at Fort Myer.

In sympathy with the disturbance near Alexandria, the wind, shortly after 7 o'clock, suddenly veered and blew in strong and frequent puffs from the west, directly across the line of flight. It attained a velocity of between twelve and sixteen miles. In the meantime more black clouds were rolling up in the west, and, with a last despairing look at the sky, the brothers ordered the machine back to the balloon house.

The threatening weather kept the attendance down, but when the attempt at flight was abandoned there were several thousand persons gathered at the side of the field. The President did not attend, there were no Cabinet members present, and only a few scattering members of Congress were to be seen.

Miss Katharine Wright drove out to the army post in the middle of the afternoon in a tally-ho. She had a party of friends with her, and had evidently made up her mind not to be outdone by Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, who entertains at tea every fine afternoon. Miss Wright brought with her a number of boxes containing sandwiches, a quantity of napkins, and several thermos bottles, presumably containing tea. The refreshments were dispensed in the balloon house.

The Wright brothers, after to-day's disappointment, were desirous of attempting a flight the first thing to-morrow morning, and they met the board of judges to-night. After talking the matter over the decision went against an early morning flight because of the difficulty of getting those members of the board who serve at Shuter's Hill there in time, and the added fact that the captive balloon at the two-and-one-half-mile mark, which had broken loose while it was being hauled down shortly after 7 o'clock, was still at large.

However, if the attempted flight to-morrow fails, an effort will be made at dawn Saturday to meet the requirements of the Government as to speed. The extension of three days granted to the Wrights expires at midnight on that day, and the brothers will exert every effort to avoid the necessity of asking for further time.

The early mornings for the last month have afforded almost perfect conditions for flight, while the evenings when the Wrights have attempted their flights have developed contrary winds and threatening skies for the most part. Lieut. Foulois to-day declared that the record of the wind gauge for the last twenty days showed that fifteen mornings at dawn presented dead calms.

The French aviators almost invariably have chosen the mornings, but the Wrights dislike to inconvenience the officers who are serving on the board of judges.

BLERIOT IS READY.

Will Fly at Seattle If Either of Wrights Challenge Him.

PARIS, July 29.—Louis Bleriot, the French aviator, who successfully flew across the English Channel in his monoplane last Sunday, appeared greatly pleased when informed this afternoon that the officials of the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition had offered a purse of $25,000 for an aeroplane race between him and the Wright brothers. He said:

"Your information is the first intimation that I have had of any such offer, but you can say that if either of the Wrights challenges me under the Seattle conditions I shall immediately accept."

SEATTLE, July 29.—When shown the statement from Louis Bleriot that he would be willing to enter a contest with the Wright brothers at the exposition grounds, Joseph Collins, Chairman of the Commission of Special Events at the exposition, said he had yet heard nothing directly from any of the aeroplanists, and he fears that they did not receive his telegrams, which were sent to New York with instructions that they be forwarded.

"The matter will be placed before the Executive Committee at once," he added, "and an appropriation of $25,000 will be set aside to provide for the prize. The exposition management is in earnest in its offer."

Mr. Collins later cabled Bleriot as follows:

"Will you enter contest with Wright Brothers for $25,000 prize at Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition Grounds at Seattle?"

A similar message was sent to the Wright Brothers.

TO SUSPEND CHANNEL TRIALS.

Latham and Lambert Ship Their Aeroplanes to Rheims.

CALAIS, July 29.—Hubert Latham and Count de Lambert, the French aeronauts, are shipping their flying machines to Rheims.

It is understood that they have abandoned the idea of making any further attempts to cross the English Channel until after "aviation week," which is the latter part of August.

PROMOTER BARNES ACCUSED OF LARCENY

Indictments Filed on Complaint of von Hochberg, Who Sold His Stock in Germany.

TELLS AGAIN OF LETTERS

And Says He Intends to Try to Establish Their Authenticity—On Parole Pending Bail.

Noah E. Barnes, President of the Cottonwood Creek Copper Company of Barnes City, Coaldale County, Col., was indicted yesterday by the Grand Jury on two charges of grand larceny, and surrendered himself at once on hearing of the indictments. After pleading not guilty, he was paroled in the custody of John W. Russell, his counsel. Bail on the two charges was fixed at $5,000.

Interest in the case is aroused by the fact that the alleged thefts were presented at the District Attorney's office by Count Hans Frederick von Hochberg, a member of the Pless family of Germany, and a former companion and playmate of Crown Prince William. The Count, in December, 1907, renounced his allegiance to Germany and gave up his inheritance there.

He became an American mine promoter and sold Barnes stock with great success to the German nobility. Soon afterward he married a young German shop girl. He has since been living under the name of Hans Frederick Barnes.

The charges of grand larceny against Barnes involve the misappropriation of $30,000 and $2,400 of the funds of the Cottonwood Creek Copper Company. After pleading not guilty to the indictments, Barnes talked freely of his affairs and of the charges brought against him, repeating many statements he has made before.

He said he first met von Hochberg in 1907 when he arrived in this country. He invested some money for him in the Cottonwood Company, and appointed him Secretary, with the authority to act as agent for the sale of stock. At that time, he said, von Hochberg showed him letters purporting to have been written by the Crown Prince of Germany, saying he intended to publish them in this country. Barnes said he bought the letters in order to prevent their being made public, with the idea of ultimately doing business through von Hochberg with the German nobility. Barnes says he has since been informed by von Hochberg that the letters were all forgeries. Barnes threatens, however, to take steps to establish their authenticity.

Barnes declared yesterday that the charges followed an attempt to get money from him on the part of von Hochberg, influenced by Robert Keuhnert, a Berlin lawyer, now in this country. His differences with both men have been exploited in a civil action over disagreements about the stock. The prisoner maintained that he was entitled to the money von Hochberg accused him of stealing, through an arrangement made with the Directors of the company, that he should have one-half the proceeds of the sale of the bonds.

According to his reckoning, the company still owes him $15,000. The $2,400 mentioned in the second part of the indictment was part of his legitimate expense account.

Barnes said that his standing in Barnes City was as high as possible. He was at one time Mayor, Controller, and Captain of Police, and in his opinion the administration at that time was admirable. The Cottonwood Creek Copper Company was capitalized, he said, at $300,000, the par value of shares being $5.

Acting District Attorney Smyth made a motion before Judge Rosalsky that the prisoner be paroled in the custody of his counsel until a bond is furnished, because of his apparent willingness to face the charges and his immediate surrender at the District Attorney's office. Bail will probably be furnished to-day.

Barnes's present address is at the Hotel Carlton, Broadway and Fifty-fourth Street.

Von Hochberg and his wife both testified before the Grand Jury, as did George C. Harrison, formerly the Count's legal adviser, and James W. Burr, whose interest in the case has not yet appeared.

DOG SHOOTS HIS MASTER.

Usual Order Reversed in Staten Island —Neither Knew It Was Loaded.

Joseph Talobarian, a steward, did not know that his .22-calibre rifle was loaded yesterday morning when he made ready to clean it in his home, at 181 Crescent Avenue, Concord, S. I. But it was, and with one of those three-inch-long cartridges which are filled with small bird shot.

Talobarian laid the rifle across a chair and then went into another room to get a piece of flannel which he intended to run through the barrel. While he was gone his little black dog, Mercy, jumped up on the chair and began to look over the rifle. She didn't know it was loaded, either. She began sniffing and clawing around the rifle lock on which there was some oil, and just as her master came back through the door the dog set off the rifle.

Mr. Talobarian fell to the floor with the load of bird shot in his stomach. Mercy ran out of the room yelping. Mrs. Talobarian, coming in to look for the cause of Mercy's grief, found her husband on the floor. She ran to a near-by hotel and telephoned to St. Vincent's Hospital at West Brighton for an ambulance.

All yesterday afternoon a surgeon was picking bird shot out of Mr. Talobarian. He took out forty shot and one rib, but he said Mr. Talobarian would get over it.

MRS. TAFT MUCH IMPROVED.

Has Practically Recovered from Nervous Breakdown of Spring.

Special to The New York Times.

BEVERLY, Mass., July 29.—Mrs. Taft has practically recovered from the nervous breakdown which has forced her into seclusion much of the Summer. The strongest indication of Mrs. Taft's improved condition came to-day in the departure of her sister, Mrs. Lewis More, for Biddeford Pool.

This is the first time that Mrs. More has felt free to leave Mrs. Taft in several months. She sailed to-day with her husband, Prof. More, on the President's yacht, Sylph. Prof. More has been visiting friends at the Pool while his wife was at Beverly. Mrs. More will spend a few days at the Pool, and will then return on the Sylph to Beverly.

Since Mrs. Taft's illness Mrs. More has been constantly with her, and she has relieved Mrs. Taft of household and society cares during the past few months.

As a result of the bracing air, the quiet and the rest, Mrs. Taft has improved wonderfully. She has even taken short trips on the Sylph.

BRYAN DENIES HE'LL MOVE.

Only a Winter Home in Texas—A Fixture in Nebraska.

CHICAGO, July 29.—William Jennings Bryan, on his arrival here to-day from Bellefontaine, Ohio, positively denied a statement attributed to him there that he intended to make his home in Texas.

"I have been annoyed by questions of this sort ever since I bought a little farm in Texas," said Mr. Bryan. "I will make a Winter home there, perhaps, but positively I have no intention of leaving Lincoln or Nebraska. I think this statement should settle the matter. I am a fixture in Nebraska."

MINNEAPOLIS, July 29.—The Northwestern Miller, the acknowledged authority on wheat, estimates the wheat yield of Minnesota and the two Dakotas at 235,000,000 bushels. The wheat will bring $300,000,000 at present prices, $165,000,000 more than last year's yield.

HAVANA HEALTH OFFICER OUT.

Dr. Guiteras Cannot Check Yellow Fever with Crippled Resources.

HAVANA, July 29.—Dr. John Guiteras, the yellow fever expert, has resigned as Chief Sanitary Officer of Havana.

He gives as his reason that his department is so crippled by unwise reduction in expenses that he is compelled to decline further responsibility for holding the fever in check.

E. S. GILLEY MORTALLY HURT.

Fell from a Trolley Car on Return Home from F. W. Gilley's Funeral.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., July 29.—E. S. Gilley, a member of the banking firm of F. W. Gilley & Co. of 1 Nassau Street, New York, had an attack of vertigo while riding on a trolley car here this afternoon.

He fell off the car, and was so injured that at the Monmouth Hospital at Long Branch, to which he was taken, it is said he cannot live.

Mr. Gilley stopped at the Curlew House at Allenhurst, and belonged to the Beach Club there.

His brother, Treasurer of the Stock Exchange, died suddenly in New York four days ago. He returned from the funeral only to-day.

WANT ROOSEVELT IN MEXICO.

Americans Petition Taft to Make Him Ambassador.

MEXICO CITY, July 29.—A petition is being circulated in this city among the members of the American colony asking that ex-President Theodore Roosevelt be named as the successor of David B. Thompson, who is expected shortly to resign as American Ambassador to this Republic. The document is addressed to President Taft, and will be mailed to the White House within a few days.

Many Americans are taking the matter seriously, and the petition has received a great number of signatures.

ROCKEFELLER TO VOTERS.

Son and Father Active in Pocantico Hills School Election.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y., July 29.—John D. Rockefeller, Jr., is taking an active part in the Pocantico Hills School District election, which is to occur next Tuesday.

Each of the voters to-day received a letter from him dated at 26 Broadway and bearing his signature. He advocates the re-election of Charles M. Ramsey, Oscar Bodelson, E. Sanders, and Mrs. C. M. Milton. He says they have made a number of changes and should be given a chance to prove the wisdom of their course. He says that his father concurs in his views and is much interested in the work of the school.

There was talk of opposition to one or two of the retiring members of the board, but, as Mr. Rockefeller employs most of the voters in the district and pays more than half the taxes, it is not believed there will be any serious opposition.

MAY DISMANTLE CAR WORKS.

McKees Rocks Plants May Go West with New $2,500,000 Chicago Mill.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, July 29.—Through one connection with the Pressed Steel Car Company here it is announced that Chicago will secure a new $2,500,000 plant for the making of passenger cars. Plans had been prepared to build the plant at McKees Rocks here, but adverse criticism, it is said, by the public and newspapers in the matter of the strike at the McKees Rocks plant has changed this. President Frank N. Hoffstot has also announced to club friends, it is said here to-night, that the $5,000,000 plants of the company, whose operatives are on strike at McKees Rocks, will now be dismantled and also moved into the Middle West, Hammond, Ind., is named as a possible site.

Ground had been secured for the erection of the new plant here. It was to be close to the present plants, which have been crowded to their full capacity. The announcement of plans was to have been made the week the 8,000 employes went out on strike. Men have been sent to the vicinity of Chicago to get the ground needed for the new plants, it is said.

DONAGHEY MAY RESIST COURT

Governor of Arkansas Summons Troops When He Is Cited to Court.

Special to The New York Times.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., July 29.—Gov. George W. Donaghey and the four other members of the State Capitol Commission were served with a notice to-day to appear before the Pulaski Chancery Court to-morrow to show cause why they should not be punished for contempt for not obeying the order of the court restraining the commission from continuing work on the new State capitol building.

Gov. Donaghey, who is Chairman of the State Capitol Commission, has called to Little Rock from Beebe a company of the Arkansas National Guard, which is quartered at Fort Logan H. Root. It is the general belief that if the Chancery Court should issue an order to-morrow to dispossess the commission of the new State capitol building the Governor will order the company to the building and resist the order of the court.

Gov. Donaghey declines to make any statement as to what he shall do in regard to his response to the citation for contempt, except to say that the work on the building will continue.

REVOLT MENACES SPANISH THRONE

Demonstration Against King Alfonso Made Outside the Palace in Madrid.

BARCELONA MOB CRUSHED

Official Report Says Principal Bands Are Killed or Captured.

LOSSES AT MELILLA GROW

Spaniards Forced Back to Walls of City, Which May Fall—Commander Wants 75,000 More Men.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, July 29.—With a hostile demonstration against King Alfonso outside the royal palace in Madrid and a report that a Provisional Government has been set up by the revolutionists in Barcelona, to-day's news from Spain is arousing the gravest apprehensions for the future of the Spanish monarchy. A correspondent at San Sebastian who saw the King leave for Madrid says his Majesty was looking careworn, and even in Court circles the possibility of danger to the throne is admitted unless the strongest measures are taken.

The latest news from Barcelona indicates that the Government has not yet succeeded in quelling the insurrection and shooting, rioting and incendiarism still continue. Catalan blood is up, says a Barcelona letter mailed Monday, and a Saragossa correspondent, writing the following day, says:

"In Barcelona the feature of the riots has been the fury of the women. They pelted the civil guards with stones and led the disturbances, which ended in the furious fighting with the troops and police. Lack of discipline, not to say mutiny, is rife in the ranks of the army. The latest news from Barcelona by train brings long lists of the wounded in yesterday's rioting, a majority from gunshot wounds. From Barcelonita, Gracia, Badalona, and other suburbs disquieting news has arrived, and the insurrection seems to have broken out all over the Province of Catalonia."

The international situation can only be complicated by the news of defeat and disaster to the Spanish arms at Melilla.

RIOTERS REPORTED CRUSHED.

Principal Bands Rounded Up in Barcelona and Killed or Captured.

MADRID, July 29.—It was officially announced to-night that the cavalry engaged at Barcelona succeeded in driving into St. Martin Square the principal bands of revolutionists, against whom the artillery opened fire, causing great losses. The survivors surrendered.

The official statement further says that it now remains only to master small groups of revolutionists in the villages in the vicinity of Barcelona.

Thus, according to official advices, the insurrection has been checked, but at a great sacrifice of life. After fighting desperately and successfully for a long time behind barricades the principal mobs were gradually driven to St. Martin's Square, where they found themselves entrapped.

Heavy detachments of artillery and cavalry came up and surrounded them. The artillery opened fire, mowing down the revolutionists, who sought to escape, but were met at every point with shot and shell.

Those of the insurgents who were not killed or seriously wounded threw down their arms and surrendered.

The insurrection continues in the neighboring villages, where the troops are proceeding. The commanders of the soldiers are under orders to spare none who attempts to resist.

News from Barcelona, the centre of the revolutionary outbreaks, is exceedingly meagre and unsatisfactory. From refugees at Lisbon comes the report that the revolutionists are using bombs and that 100 persons were killed and 200 wounded during the earlier stages of the conflicts.

Premier Maura announced to-night that he had received more favorable reports from Barcelona, where the situation, according to this official statement, is slightly ameliorated.

"The arrival of reinforcements," said the Premier, "will permit the repression of outbreaks."

Throughout the day, however, advices received from various quarters indicated that the disturbances in Catalonia were quite as serious as yesterday, although the Government has succeeded in getting troops through to certain of the disaffected points. The lines of communication, which had been cut everywhere in Catalonia, have in part been repaired.

Premier Maura May Resign.

The report that a provisional Government has been established at Barcelona and that the civil Governor has been assassinated is unconfirmed, but rumors are persistent that Premier Maura will resign and that a military dictatorship will be set up in Madrid. However, reports that King Alfonso would form a military Cabinet, presided over by Gen. Weyler, are officially denied.

At the outskirts of Melilla the Spanish arms have suffered a serious check. Three thousand soldiers have been killed or wounded, and the Moorish hordes are fighting the Spanish at the very walls of the city.

A Moorish army is marching on Alhucemas, and a warship has been hurriedly dispatched from Melilla to aid the garrison there.

News that the Moors are retreating from Mount Gurugu has only slightly decreased the general inquietude, as their forces have been strengthened by the arrival of 5,000 additional tribesmen, and Gen. Marina, the Commander at Melilla, has asked for 75,000 reinforcements.

The complete mobilization of the Spanish army has been ordered. All officers on leave have been recalled. The reserves of all classes have been summoned to the colors.

There is a persistent report in Carlist headquarters that Don Jaime, the Pretender, is about to issue an address to the powers and a manifesto to the Spanish people, maintaining his claim to the Spanish throne.

A statement was issued this morning by the Ministry of Finance designed to stop the fall of Spanish securities. It says the Treasury balance is $18,000,000, of which $13,600,000 is in gold. No extraordinary taxes are contemplated.

Señor Lacierva, the Minister of the Interior, announced to-day that any newspaper printing reports disagreeing with official information would be prosecuted and its editions suppressed. Since the declaration of martial law throughout Spain yesterday the censorship over news has been more severe.

French Cruiser for Melilla.

PARIS, July 29.—The French Government has decided to dispatch a cruiser and a chartered French Line steamer to Melilla to take off the French residents in case of danger.

Advices received at Hendaye from a conservative and exceptionally well-informed source in Madrid depicts the situation, both exterior and interior, as being more critical than at any time since the Cuban war.

Although the Spanish Government seeks to create the impression that the movement in Catalonia is anarchistic and simply a protest against the war in Morocco and the policy of Premier Maura, there are the gravest reasons for believing that it is a general and widespread revolutionary outbreak, which a combination of Republicans and Social-Revolutionaries have been secretly and effectively preparing for a long time.

A dispatch to the Journal from Madrid says that the revolution at Barcelona, it is alleged, was arranged by former Deputy Leroux, chief of the Republicans at Barcelona, who returned recently to Spain from Buenos Ayres.

BARCELONA RUNS WITH BLOOD.

Fighting Continues and Reinforcements Are Blocked by Strikers.

PARIS, July 29.—Spanish couriers from Barcelona arriving at Cerbere on the frontier report that artillery is battering the barricades, behind which the insurgents are fighting desperately. Heavy fighting is in progress on the Rambla, in San Anne Square, and the Calle del Espino.

The gutters are running with blood. The number of dead and wounded cannot be estimated, but it is believed to be heavy.

Attempts on the Captain General continue as he disposes the position of the troops.

The Military Governor of Barcelona published a decree to-day ordering the inhabitants of the city to return to their homes. After twenty-four hours any one found in the streets is liable to be shot on sight.

Many instances of soldiers refusing to fire on the mobs are reported. A Lieutenant of infantry threatened to shoot a policeman who was about to fire his revolver into the crowds.

The Government forces, failing to make headway, have been obliged to act on the defensive, attacking only when absolutely compelled by the menacing position of the revolutionists.

The situation is further complicated by the spread of the general strike ordered by the labor organizations of Barcelona two days ago. The indications are that the strike will spread to the provinces of Lerida, Gerona, and Tarragona, but no definite news has been received from these points.

The terror-stricken people are fleeing from the larger towns to the open country and the small villages, where there is less exposure to danger.

Five convents and several private residences have been burned at Llanza, where the excitement is growing.

Grave events are expected at Figueras, a town twenty-one miles from Gerona. Comparative calm had been restored when orders were issued to the recruits to report for duty. The entire population is preparing to resist. The Portbou express left Figueras this morning, but stopped at Llanza, where the track had been blown up by dynamite.

At Junquera, a small town twenty-eight miles northeast of Gerona, telegraph poles have been chopped down. All places where public funds have been deposited are guarded by the military. Business is at a complete standstill. The merchants are panic stricken and are placing their funds in foreign banks for safekeeping.

Advices from Granollers, sixteen miles from Barcelona, state that two convents have been burned to the ground.

At Cassadelaselva the civil guard was disarmed by the mob and imprisoned in the barracks. The call to the colors of the reservists of 1906 and 1907, who are on leave, was without result, not a single reservist reporting for duty.

The situation in Barcelona is rendered desperate by the absence of a sufficient military force capable of putting down the revolutionists. This condition results from the dispatch of all available troops to Melilla. The garrisons throughout Catalonia have thus been reduced to 6,000 men, while the revolutionists at Barcelona and adjacent towns far exceed that number.

The Government forces are also scattered by the need of quelling outbreaks at many detached points. The isolation of the province, owing to the destruction of railways, gave the revolutionary element and strikers forty-eight hours to make uninterrupted preparations to cut off the arrival of reinforcements. They are thus masters of the situation.

The line from Madrid to Barcelona is a scene of desolation. Trenches many feet wide have been cut across the railway embankments in the country districts. The small bridges spanning the streets in several towns have been pulled down.

The arrival of reinforcements, so urgently needed by the Government forces, is retarded by the destruction of railroads and the avenues of communication leading to the city. The revolutionists are heavily armed with muskets, knives, and revolvers. They have an effective organization and hospital equipment which promptly looks after the dead and wounded.

The Government is now seeking to relieve the city by sea, as the land communications are interrupted. All available ships are being hurried to Barcelona.

Whether there is an ulterior political purpose behind the revolutionary uprising throughout Catalonia is not yet clear. Outwardly the movement is thus far a protest against the Government's war policy in Morocco and its levy of large reserve for war purposes.

MELILLA DEFEAT DISASTROUS.

Spanish Loss 3,000—Their Lines Cut and City May Fall.

MADRID, July 29.—Official dispatches received here to-day admit that the battle between Moorish tribesmen and the Spanish forces outside of Melilla on July 27 was a disastrous defeat. The Moors cut off communication with the Spanish outposts, and the main force of the Spaniards was driven back under the walls of the city, where fighting continued desperately.

The Spanish killed and wounded numbered almost 3,000, which takes no account of the men at the advance posts, who evidently were cut off and abandoned to their fate. Melilla is full of wounded men.

The extent of the disaster is plainly apparent from Gen. Marina's dispatch, as given out at the War Office to-day. He says:

"On July 27 the Moors cut the railroad, severing communications with our outposts. Our batteries shelled the Moors, but the advance posts were endangered and they had to be abandoned. The situation at Melilla is grave, despite the desperate bravery of the troops, who are now fighting under the walls of the city.

"Our losses in the engagement were Gen. Pintos, a Colonel, two Lieutenant Colonels, five Captains, many officers and subalterns, and about 1,000 men. The wounded number at least 1,500, including many officers. The Hippodrome is full of wounded soldiers. Two Generals were mortally wounded."

News has been received that Alhucemas, a small island fortress and prison settlement belonging to Spain, was attacked yesterday by an army of 6,000 Moors. Heretofore the fighting has been confined to the vicinity of Melilla, but this latest move of the Moors shows that they are extending their operations.

Alhucemas is about thirty-five miles west of Melilla, on the coast of Morocco, and is five miles southeast of Cape Morro.

Six battalions of Spanish troops from the Algeciras and neighboring garrisons embarked at Gibraltar to-day and sailed for Melilla, to reinforce the Spanish forces there. The morale of the troops is described as being excellent.

PARIS, July 29.—French army officers familiar with the topography of the Riff country consider that the official report of the Spanish defeat by Moors at Melilla spells a complete disaster, and they would not be surprised if the next news told of the fall of the city.

They point out that the tribesmen evidently succeeded in their tactics, which they twice tried unsuccessfully, of descending from Mount Gurugu and cutting in half the Spanish front, which was four miles long, extending from the land forts at Melilla to the extreme left at Mount Atalayou, a promontory on the shore of the Marchica Lagoon.

The Spanish left probably was cut off without communication, while the main body, with the Fifth Effectives, went on fighting the battle with desperation under the walls of the city.

MELILLA, July 29.—The battleship Numancia has been hastily dispatched to Alkucemas, around which the tribesmen are concentrating for an attack.

The Moors outside of this place have been reinforced by 5,000 men. The Spanish forces, which have been fighting desperately, are well-nigh exhausted, but are hoping that aid will reach them soon.

The battle on Tuesday was a shambles and as a result the Moors abandoned their positions on the Spanish right flank and retreated to the other side of Mount Gurugu.

The greatest heroism was shown by the officers who led the troops up the hillside. They were the first to fall from the Moorish bullets. Gen. Pintos was slain at the moment he reached the summit, and a Lieutenant Colonel fell, pierced by a bullet, while in the act of offering his water gourd to a dying soldier.

The Spanish dead were buried in the mining excavations leading to Mount Gurugu.

PORTUGAL NOT TO ACT.

Report That Troops Would Be Sent to Spanish Frontier Denied.

LISBON, July 29.—Official denial is given to the report that Portugal will send troops to the frontier if disorders occur in the neighboring Spanish provinces.

Refugees who have arrived here from Barcelona say that city is in a state of complete anarchy. During the first few days of the fighting, the refugees declare, more than a hundred persons were killed and several hundred were wounded.

$250,000 A YEAR TELEPHONE SAVING

Loeb Finds Twenty-three Superfluous Trunk Lines in Custom House.

PETTY GRAFTING STOPPED

Copies of Inspection Certificates to be Furnished to Masters Without Fees.

After raising a number of salaries Collector Loeb has been looking about to see where he can cut down expenses. He began by investigating the telephone lines running into the Custom House, and he now believes that the Treasury Department could save $250,000 a year cutting out superfluous telephones.

He recently appointed a committee of three to learn what 'phones could be cut out by the service here. On their report the Collector has cut out twenty-three direct or trunk lines. As each telephone cost $66 a year the saving will be considerable. In addition there is a saving on out-of-town calls, for investigation showed that persons, presumably in the service, had been calling up out-of-town places.

Collector Loeb has also taken up another matter and incidentally stopped a petty graft. He gave out this statement yesterday:

"For many years it has been the practice for Custom House brokers to make certified copies of steamboat inspection certificates from the official copies on file in the marine division of the Collector's office, for which a fee was charged by the broker to the owner of the vessel.

"Collector Loeb has issued instructions that hereafter these copies of the inspection certificates shall be furnished by the Government without cost to the vessel owners, and additional clerks have been assigned to the Marine Division for this purpose."

Philo, Ill., Almost Wiped Out by Fire.

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., July 29.—Philo, Ill., a village in Champaign County, was almost wiped out by fire early to-day. Half the business section was destroyed. The damage is estimated at $40,000.

LIGHTNING KILLS TWO.

Thunderstorm After Torrid Day in Chicago Adds to List of Victims.

CHICAGO, July 29.—Two days of torrid weather in this city were broken shortly after noon to-day by a thunderstorm which brought temporary relief. Several deaths resulted either from the storm or the great heat. Thousands of dollars' worth of damage was done to buildings in the city. With the passing of the cool wave brought by the storm the ambulances and patrol wagons again hurried through the streets for victims of prostration. A maximum temperature of 92 degrees was reached. This swung down to 77 at 2 o'clock in the afternoon and again back to 84 by 6 o'clock. The wind reached a velocity of forty-two miles an hour during the storm, and it was this that caused the great damage to property.

Carl Hanson, a truck farmer, was struck by lightning and killed instantly while trying to escape the rain. Thomas Madoney, a butcher, fell dead on the sidewalk in front of his shop. James Turner, a driver, was struck by lightning while on the seat of a lumber wagon. He was hurled to the road dead.

Joseph Behman of Winnetka was prostrated by the heat while fishing from the Kenilworth Pier. He rolled from the pier into the lake and was drowned. Mrs. Hattie Henderson and Mrs. Dorothy Hartung were struck by an electric light wire that had been blown down by the wind, and were burned seriously. The prostrations, several of which may prove fatal, numbered more than twenty.

MORE LAKE TRAFFIC.

Shipments on Great Lakes Heavier Than a Year Ago.

WASHINGTON, July 29.—A considerable improvement in business as compared with conditions prevailing a year ago is noted in a report made public today by the Bureau of Statistics regarding lake traffic for the month of June last.

It is shown that the domestic shipments from lake ports of leading classes of commodities totaled 10,179,633 net tons, compared with 7,427,616 net tons shipped during June, 1908. The domestic shipments for the current season, to the end of June, 19,859,552 tons, show a total of about 65 per cent. in excess of the total domestic shipments for the corresponding period in 1908.

The iron ore shipments for the month, 5,250,657 gross tons, were more than double thosee during June, 1908. The June shipments of soft coal, 1,767,098 net tons, were about 17 per cent. below the June, 1908, figures, although the season's shipments, 3,368,262 net tons, were nearly 18 per cent. higher than last year. The shipments of hard coal during June, mainly from Erie, Buffalo, and Oswego, 536,401 net tons, also proceeded at a lower rate than during June, 1908. Lumber shipments during the month were largely in excess of June, 1908. It is stated that wheat shipments compared favorably with the quantity shipped during June, 1908.

MAIDHOF WOMAN TRAPS TWO OTHERS

Turns Against Her Lawyer and Another Man and They Are Held as Forgers.

GAVE HER CHECKS, SHE SAYS

Police Say Another Woman with a Mole on Her Cheek Has Been Distributing Checks.

Grace Maidhof, the young woman who has been letting loose a flood of small checks on uptown merchants for part cash in the last few months, and who was arrested on Tuesday but got free through her lawyer paying money to the complainants, yesterday turned on the lawyer, John H. Freese of 47 West Thirty-fourth Street, and R. H. S. Whitney, a law clerk, with whom she had been living at 315 West 113th Street, telling the police and the District Attorney's office that she was but an instrument for Freese and Whitney. They were both arrested, Freese in court in the morning, and Whitney last night, when the girl laid a trap for him.

For some weeks the police have been receiving complaints about young women who would visit merchants and doctors, become indebted for a small amount, and then present for payment a forged check, receiving anywhere from $10 to $40 in change. That there was more than one woman in the case the police believe, because the person who made a specialty of going to the offices of young doctors had a mole on her alabaster cheek. The Maidhof woman has no mole on her cheek.

The Maidhof woman was arrested on Tuesday on the charge of passing small forged checks on a Broadway florist and a Columbus Avenue jeweler. At that time she said falsely that she lived at 82 Central Park West. Freese appeared in the West Side Court to defend her, giving her money, she says, with which she paid the two complainants, who then refused to prosecute. Magistrate Steinert reluctantly released her.

The stories about the girl with a mole on her cheek and about the arrest of the Maidhof woman, caused many merchants and professional men to go to Magistrate Steinert and complain that she should not have been turned loose until other possible victims had had a chance to look at her. They gave such good descriptions of the Maidhof woman that the Magistrate issued another warrant for her arrest, this based on a small check that she had passed on June 4, on Richard Wigger, an Amsterdam Avenue milk dealer.

She was found and arrested on Wednesday night, and yesterday morning she was again in the West Side Court before Magistrate Steinert. Freese, the young lawyer, was again in court to look after her. They had a talk together, and he was seen to be violently protesting against something she had said.

The police told the Magistrate that she would make a confession to him in his chambers, but the Magistrate told her to say out what she wanted to say. He did not feel pleasantly about the way she had escaped on Tuesday. She then told the Magistrate that she had only passed checks which had been given to her by Freese and Whitney.

Magistrate Steinert ordered that the young lawyer be arrested at once on the charge of forgery, which was done. He was paroled until this morning. The Maidhof woman also was held in bail for examination this morning, but she gave so much information to the police and the District Attorney's office that the charges against her will not be pushed vigorously.

Freese was in terror at his office yesterday. He told the newspaper men early in the afternoon that he was working on a statement that he would give out at 5 o'clock. At 5:30, with trembling hands, he gave out a few typewritten words which said that he wasn't guilty.

The young lawyer said he had no idea where Whitney was. This young man was formerly a process server for Abe Hummel. At the beginning of the Summer he got employment as a stenographer with Blandy, Mooney & Shipman, lawyers, at 37 Wall Street. They were disappointed with his work. He absented himself from their offices from about the time the Maidhof woman got into trouble, and when he went back on Wednesday he told Mr. Shipman that he had been attending to a case.

Though his employers did not know it, he has had a desk in Freese's office for some time. Mr. Shipman discharged him when he indicated that he had some outside connection.

Yesterday afternoon and last night the Maidhof woman told the police and the District Attorney's office all about herself and her two alleged backers. She said part of her blood was Indian. She was born in Missouri, where she was adopted by a family named Richardson. They had moved to California and it was out there that she met a man named Maidhof, who was the Western representative of an Eastern firm. They lived together as man and wife. A year or so ago Maidhof went to Europe, leaving her behind. She then joined Whitney, she said, and through him she met Freese.

Thinking that Whitney might go back to the flat at 315 West 133th Street last night to see the Maidhof woman, detectives took her back there. They were right. Early in the night Whitney called up. The woman told him to come home. She hadn't turned on him in court, she declared. He said he feared a trap, and rang off. The detectives traced the call to a saloon in University Place, where Whitney had been with two other men.

Later he called up the flat again, when the Maidhof woman talked to him so pleadingly that he agreed to meet her downtown at once. Detective O'Brien went down on the elevated train to the rendezvous, and Oswald went with the woman. He left her after they got off the train at Park Place at 11:30 o'clock. She walked over Broadway and Duane Street, where Whitney was standing in a doorway. He whistled to her. She went to him. Oswald jumped on him and arrested him.

At Police Headquarters he was charged with acting on concert with the Maidhof woman and Freese in forging and passing forged checks. The woman told the detectives that Whitney advised her to ask Freese for money, which he would give to her. She did so, whereupon he gav her a bad check. She passed that. Most of the bad checks, however, she said, had been given to her by Whitney.

FRANCE ANGRY ABOUT TARIFF.

That's Why the Bourse Wouldn't List Steel Common, Jusserand Thinks.

J. J. Jusserand, French Ambassador to the United States, sailed for France yesterday with his wife on the liner Lorraine. Before sailing the Ambassador touched on the failure of the Paris Bourse to list United States Steel common stock.

"I believe that Maurice Leon was right," he said, "in saying that the listing of Steel common failed because it came at a critical time because of the tariff conditions in the United States. It is not altogether a question of give and take between the French people and the United States. The French people, it appears, are in a bad humor because of the condition which the American tariff question has assumed.

"What would the American people think if France should put a high tariff on American goods? The feeling which would then be entertained here is just about the same, it seems, as is now becoming manifested by the French people in regard to the tariff situation here.

"Personally, I do not believe in high tariff, where it affects necessities of life. The daughter of the workingman has as much right to have a ribbon in her hair as has the daughter of a rich man—the ribbon in a way is to be classed as a necessity. Yet if a high tariff is placed on ribbon the poor girl finds herself unable to get the ribbon. The rich girl, on the contrary, can pay the extra amount."

stand Justice Mills said he wanted to say a few words to those in the courtroom. He began by a reference to the applause that marked the proceedings yesterday when Thaw made a witty reply to one of Mr. Jerome's questions. He said he wanted everybody to realize that it was a serious matter. He warned the spectators that if anybody made any further demonstration the court attendants without further instructions from him were to eject such persons from the room, be they men or women. It was a woman who clapped her hands so loudly yesterday.

Merrill Woman Records Lost.

Hartridge then took the stand. Mr. Morschauser asked him if he had brought the Susan Merrill books.

"The woman you refer to," Hartridge said, "gave me some books and accounts last Fall. The books I am unable to find and the accounts I destroyed some months ago. The books contained names we desired none to see, and the accounts were destroyed for the same reason."

Mr. Morschauser wanted to know why it was that Hartridge had been able to find the things that Mr. Jerome wanted, while the books that he (Mr. Morschauser) so much desired had disappeared. Hartridge said that he had moved about from one place to another a great deal in the last year and that he had been unable to find the books, although he had diligently searched for them.

These are the books which were expected to so strongly corroborate the Merrill woman's testimony that Thaw had flogged girls in her rooms.

"Is it not true," Mr. Morschauser asked, looking hard at Hartridge, "that you are now conducting a suit against Mrs. William Thaw?"

"That is quite true," answered Hartridge.

"Would those books have any significance in that case?"

"Not a bit," Hartridge replied quickly.

Justice Mills at this point asked Hartridge if he had any idea as to the whereabouts of the books.

"No, your Honor, I have not," Hartridge answered.

Mr. Jerome asked Hartridge if he had brought certain communications relative to Thaw's case which he had in his possession. Hartridge said he had, and then produced what he later described as about "twenty pounds of literature."

Mr. Morschauser objected. He wanted to know if the letters and papers were those Thaw had given to him while he was Thaw's attorney. Hartridge said they were, and a long tilt followed as to their admissibility. Justice Mills finally ruled that such communications as were meant for third parties might be offered in evidence provided they had been made public by the delivery to the third party for whom intended.

Hartridge said he had some such communications from Thaw in his possession, and Jerome told him to produce them.

Says Thaw's Mother Paid the Money.

"Did you have certain accounts turned over to you by Miss Merrill, who testified here the other day?" asked Jerome.

Mr. Morschauser objected, but Justice Mills ruled that the answer was permissible as secondary evidence.

"What were those accounts?"

"Statements of moneys received and paid out."

"From what source did those moneys come?"

"From Mrs. William Thaw."

"Did you from time to time pay out money to Miss Merrill, and is the disposition of that money shown by these accounts."

"Yes."

"Did you have directions to pay over this money to the Merrill woman."

"General directions to pay it over, but not necessarily to Miss Merrill."

"In your conferences with Thaw was any money given you in consequence of which you paid out money by direction of Mr. Thaw?"

"Not of Mr. Thaw, no."

"Did you communicate to Miss Merrill what Thaw communicated to you and by Thaw's authority?"

"I did."

"Did Thaw write you on such a subject."

"Yes."

"Have you any paper containing such directions?"

"Yes."

The paper proved to be a note written by Thaw to Hartridge in which Mr. Hartridge was instructed to communicate this message to the Merrill woman:

"Mr. Reid says to say nothing."

"Tell what Thaw told you to tell Miss Merrill and what you did communicate to her," Mr. Jerome said to Hartridge.

"I was told to tell her to keep quiet about what happened in her house," replied Hartridge.

Thaw looked at Hartridge without changing countenance when this testimony was given. The elder Mrs. Thaw kept her eyes on Hartridge, too, but none of Thaw's relatives or friends gave any indication of what they thought of the testimony.

Asked if he had received any other instructions from Thaw, Hartridge said he had been told to tell a woman to keep quiet and "keep everybody else quiet also."

The name of the woman to whom this message was sent was not disclosed.

"Did Thaw instruct you to communicate with others than the Merrill woman," Mr. Jerome resumed.

"Yes."

"Tell it."

Told to Get Certain Letters.

"He told me to get certain letters at another place sent to him there under the name of Reid."

"Did you get them?"

"I did."

"What did you do with them?"

"I gave them to Thaw."

"Did you see the contents of those letters?"

"I did not."

"Any other instructions for a third party?"

"Yes, Thaw gave me a letter of instructions to get certain letters."

The letter was written to a person in West Thirty-sixth Street.

"Explain what happened in connection with this letter."

"I was to go to this place and get letters for Thaw. I went twice. The first time I had a letter signed 'Thaw,' but I could not get them with that letter, so he gave me the letter signed 'Reid,' and I succeeded in getting the letters from a man."

There was a lull in the proceedings at this point while Hartridge tried to find other letters or notes meant for third persons. In this interval Jerome sat down and Thaw, whose chair was next to Jerome's, leaned over and said something that made the District Attorney smile.

It developed that the writings that Hartridge was selecting had to do with Ethel Thomas, whose name was mentioned often after the killing of Stanford White and prior to Thaw's commitment to Matteawan.

The communications that had to do with the Thomas girl were statements for the newspapers written by Thaw, but given out by Hartridge as emanating from himself. In one of them Thaw characterized as false the reported death of Ethel Thomas, and said that it had emanated from a gang who had hidden her. In another communication Hartridge said that Thaw wanted him to mention the names of Abraham Hummel and De Lancey Nicoll in the article.

Another note produced by Hartridge told him that he was to tell Mrs. Dix to say nothing about a Mr. Thaw renting a small flat under the name of Kane.

"Did you ever communicate with a Mrs. Reid?" Mr. Jerome asked.

"No, Sir."

"Do you know a Mrs. Reid?"

"Yes, I know a number of Mrs. Reids," answered Hartridge, and the spectators tittered.

Mr. Morschauser here took the witness.

"You are suing Mrs. William Thaw for something like $120,000, are you not?" asked Mr. Morschauser.

"No; it's $93,000. It may be more later," replied Hartridge.

"You spent something like $123,000, did you not?"

"Yes, and for the purposes here stated," replied Hartridge, pointing to the letters and documents in front of him.

"Did you give any information in this case to the District Attorney of New York County or any one representing him?"

"I did not; I told them that if they wanted to get anything out of me they would have to subpoena me."

Mr. Hartridge asked and received permission to make a statement.

"When I was subpoenaed here by the Attorney General," he said, looking at Morschauser, "I wrote you about it, yet you let it be given out to the newspapers that you were surprised when you saw me here. Mr. Murphy of the District Attorney's office telephoned to me yesterday, yet you said you could not find me. When you subpoenaed me I told you that you did not need me as a witness."

This ended the Hartridge examination.

Susan Merrill was recalled by Jerome and told of the incident of Thaw's alleged flogging of a girl. Under cross-examination she admitted that she had communicated several times with Stanford White. She said she knew Thaw before she knew White. Mr. Morschauser got her to admit that her maiden name was Cahill. She said she had it changed by court proceedings. She would not admit that she ever had any dealings with Stanford White, other than talks relative to renting her apartments.

Thaw Grows Nervous.

Then Thaw was called and walked rapidly around to the witness stand. As he took his seat he drank a glass of water. His mother and other relatives and all the alienists were looking straight at him. Mr. Morschauser stood alert to interpose objections to any questions he might consider improper. The crowded courtroom was hushed and every eye was on Thaw.

Jerome asked a few unimportant questions, then said something to Assistant District Attorney Murphy, and, wheeling around quickly, asked:

"Mr. Thaw, do you know whether you were crazy when you shot Stanford White?"

"Not medically so. The alienists say so," Thaw answered.

"What alienists said that?"

"Dr. Lamb, Dr. Baker, Dr. Jacobi, Dr. Evans, and others."

"Do you remember that Dr. White swore you did not realize the nature and quality of the act you committed?" Jerome asked.

"Yes, I think I do," Thaw answered, as his face flushed slightly.

"Did not Dr. Pilgrim swear the same thing?"

"And Dr. Gregory?"

"I think not. He said it was a mental derangement."

"Did you not understand that in the opinion of Dr. Allan McLane Hamilton you were an insane man?"

"I should have said no," Thaw replied, his face very red, tapping his foot on the floor, and taking a sip of water.

"Did you not know that Dr. Flint, Dr. McDonald, Dr. Pritchard, and others all said that you were insane?"

"Yes, but not in the way you use the term, Mr. Jerome."

"There were fourteen alienists who appeared at the habeas corpus proceedings before Justice Morschauser who swore that you were crazy when you killed White. You know that, don't you?"

Thaw seemed worried and the eyes of his alienists and relatives were all focused on him. Once in a while Thaw looked at them, but the questions were coming so fast that he had little time to think of anything else.

"There were fourteen men who thought you were insane then?"

"I answered that yesterday," Thaw answered.

"Did you know the nature and quality of your act?" Jerome asked.

"I do not think I did."

"What?"

Says He Had a "Brain Storm."

"I think that the alienists who knew most about me thought that what I had was a brain storm," Thaw replied, his face flushing again.

"Did you understand by that a mental disturbance proceeding from a diseased mind?"

"Mental derangement, yes, but the diseased mind, no."

"Which of the alienists did you accept?"

"Dr. Gregory, Dr. Hammond, and Dr. White."

Mr. Jerome then read from the records an answer of Dr. Gregory in which he said that Thaw was suffering from a form of insanity when he killed White.

"Did Gregory say that?" asked Jerome.

"I don't think he said it that way."

"Were you on trial for murder?"

"Yes."

"Don't you understand that Justice Morschauser held that you were insane at Poughkeepsie."

"No, I did not think so. He did not sustain the proceedings, that was all."

"Did he say you had not proved your case?"

"Yes," Thaw answered after some hesitation.

"Did you not understand that Dr. Jelliffe, Dr. White, Dr. Hammond, and others said you were crazy when you shot White?"

"In effect, yes," Thaw answered, after a brief hesitancy.

At this moment Evelyn Nesbit Thaw came into the courtroom and took her seat at the far end of the jury box where she could see her husband's face. Thaw looked in her direction when he saw everybody else in the courtroom do the same, but quickly averted his eyes and again looked at Mr. Jerome. The presence of his wife seemed to increase his nervousness.

"Do you remember that Dr. Pilgrim said there was no real danger in you as long as you were quiet and had rest?"

"Yes."

Would Avoid Brainstorms if Freed.

"If you are released do you think you will have another brainstorm?"

"No."

"Why?"

"I would be careful to avoid it."

"Do you agree with Dr. Evans that you are suffering from dementia precox?"

"No, I do not. Do you Mr. Jerome?"

"No, I am not an expert."

"Neither am I."

"You had been suffering from emotion before the shooting, had you not?"

"Yes."

"Do you believe Graeme Hammond was right?"

"Dr. White?"

"Yes, I think so."

"Dr. Jelliffe?"

"No."

"Why?"

"I understood he was misinformed by your office."

"Who did that in my office?"

"I do not know."

"Was anybody else fooled by my office? Was Evans?"

"I think he was."

"Do you think Hamilton testified falsely?"

"I don't know."

"How about Flint, McDonald, and others?"

"I don't think they know anything about me."

"Do you think that Dr. Hamilton would testify falsely?"

"I do not know whether he would or not."

Mr. Jerome ceased his rapid fire of questions at this juncture, and he produced a bulky document of twenty-seven pages, which he handed to Thaw. As Thaw took them Mr. Morschauser said:

"Take your time and look them all over, Mr. Thaw."

After several minutes Thaw looked up with a smile on his face and seemed to have regained his confidence. The papers were the newspaper clippings, &c., which Thaw referred to yesterday as "rubbish."

"Well, what did you do with them?" asked Jerome.

"I compiled this for Delmas," Thaw answered smilingly. "I thought it might help him."

"Do you mean to tell me you were going to dump all this 'rubbish' on Delmas?" Jerome asked, smiling also.

"I did not mean it was all rubbish," Thaw answered quietly.

As a matter of fact much that the document contained was used by Mr. Delmas, as those who read his summing up recollected. Some of the annotations on the margins, read by Thaw, were the following, some being excerpts from letters written Thaw by sympathizers when he was in the Tombs. Others were from standard works and the sayings of famous men.

Thaw Reads His Own Notes.

Here are a few of them as read by Thaw:

> I know of no blacker crime than to degrade the innocent.
>
> President Roosevelt said in a message, "the hideous crime of rape, the most abominable in all the category of crime."
>
> Not only tainted flesh, but people of tainted minds and souls.

There were several Biblical references and also a reference to the Hart McKee divorce case and the story of St. George and the Dragon.

When he finished reading, Thaw turned to Jerome and asked:

"Where did you get these papers? You have no more right to them than we have. These are my papers."

At the request of Mr. Jerome, Thaw told the story of St. George and the Dragon, and said that many of the other things referred to were contained in the 2,000 letters that he received when in the Tombs. The term "red dragon," it came out, was due to a reference to such a beast in a letter written to Mrs. William Thaw by a French woman.

Jerome next produced a copy of an address, as it was called, that Dr. Hamilton said was written by Thaw. Thaw said that it was not a copy of anything he had ever written. He said the document caused him to doubt the mental soundness of Dr. Hamilton.

"Who was it you likened to the red dragon—Stanford White?" Mr. Jerome asked.

"That is what I said," Thaw replied.

Another document was offered to which Mr. Morschauser objected, but Thaw said to let it in. It contained nothing of importance.

Another question asked Thaw was why he had once telephoned to the children's society and asked it to keep open all night. He said he did not know then that it did. He sent this message, he said, so as to have an agent of the society available in the event that Anthony Comstock should have Stanford White arrested.

Then Jerome handed Thaw another paper.

"What is it?" asked Thaw after he had read it.

"It was one of the things they offered to the commission to prove that you were sane," replied Jerome, laughing.

"Really." Thaw answered, and laughed, too.

Thaw will continue on the stand when court reconvenes to-morrow at 10 o'clock. Mr. Jerome said he would conclude his examination before noon, when Mr. Morschauser will take Thaw in hand.

AGREE ON TARIFF BILL SURRENDER TO TAFT

in equivalent ad valorem percentages the bill as a whole will be a revision upward.

For instance, in the chemical schedule there are more than seventy decreases, and only about twenty increases in rates. But the decreases affect articles on which the imports for 1904 were less than $500,000, while the increases affect the great bulk of the imports. President Taft has said that from the viewpoint of the protective theory, on which this bill was prepared, that is not the true or logical method of determining the worth of the measure. But it is the way in which the people who are affected by the increases and reductions will look at it.

President Taft's Lesson.

Past question, this tariff fight has given President Taft one lesson that will be of great value to him during the remainder of his Presidency. It has been demonstrated to him by hard, if not by bitter, experience that he cannot rely upon the assurances of co-operation of Aldrich and Cannon. Throughout the struggle the President has sought to work with these men chiefly because they are at the head of the party organization in the two houses. Right after his election to the Presidency Mr. Taft seriously contemplated lending himself to the effort then forming to defeat Cannon's re-election as Speaker. He decided at length that such action on his part would so disrupt the party in the House as to imperil the prospects of the great programme of legislation chiefly with regard to corporations which he intends to make one of the distinguishing features of his administration.

He concluded that he could not afford to rely for his legislation upon a more or less irresponsible band of Republican insurgents in the House allied with a totally irresponsible group of Democrats. He had to work with the majority of his party. It was in carrying out that line that he assisted Cannon in the organization of the House. He had then the assurance that Cannon would return the compliment not only on the Tariff bill but on the greater legislative programme to come.

At the same time President Taft had the assurance of Senator Aldrich that the Tariff bill finally evolved would be such that he could sign it as a fulfillment of his campaign promises. The President accepted the assurances of both Cannon and Aldrich, and throughout the contest in House and Senate stuck to his faith that these men would play fairly with him. While the Republican insurgents in the Senate were demonstrating the rapacious character of the bill Aldrich was framing there the President stuck faithfully to Aldrich, and never gave any sign of wavering in his confidence that everything would certainly be made right eventually. He had been told by Aldrich that it was necessary to make combinations in order to get any bill through the Senate, but that once the bill was in conference it could be straightened out easily.

He accepted that statement at face value and it was not until the bill had actually passed the Senate and the conferrees were working on it that the President realized exactly what Aldrich's promises were worth. Then Aldrich calmly told the President that the combination it had been necessary to make in the Senate was based upon such promises that he was not at liberty to break them, and it was up to Mr. Taft to secure the votes for the reductions he demanded. At the same time that this attitude on Aldrich's part became evident the President found that Cannon was working with all his might for some of the most objectionable propositions of the whole tariff fight, notably the heavy increases on gloves inserted at the demand of former Congressman Littauer, the close personal friend of Cannon and Vice President Sherman. Sherman, too, was lending all his influence to secure this increase on gloves.

President Stood Alone.

Thus the President found himself standing alone in behalf of the fulfillment of his campaign pledges, deserted by all of the influential men in both Senate and House, on whose assurances of support he had relied. Then at length Mr. Taft put on his fighting clothes and went into the fray. The result is, of course, to fix the chief responsibility for the bill upon him alone. He deserves the credit for what it is, but he will also find it difficult to avoid the blame for what it is not.

The blame really lies in large part with Aldrich, Cannon, and their men, but the President will certainly find that among the people there is a large disposition to hold him responsible for not interfering earlier. The conviction from the events of the last few days is unavoidable that if the President had gone into the fight two months ago with the same vigor he has displayed since the bill went into conference, a very different kind of measure would have gone to him for signature. Whether what he has learned as to the reliance to be placed upon Aldrich and Cannon is worth what it has cost him or not remains to be seen. He has his great legislative programme all before him. Every item in it is of the character that Aldrich and Cannon oppose with all their strength. The President has had their assurances of support, and up to this time he has trusted them. But it is hard to believe, after the demonstration they have just given of the value of their assurances, that Mr. Taft will continue to permit them to handle his legislation uninterfered with.

Inside the conference committee room proceedings were of the most informal sort. The first reading of the President's letter raised a storm of protest, the suggestion that a disagreement be reported was freely made, and it was charged that "that man in the White House" would break down protection if he could. But soon calmer reason prevailed, and, bowing to the inevitable, Mr. Fordney moved that the President's highest rate of $1.25 on lumber be accepted. That set the tide going in the other direction, and the rest of the day was spent by the committee in gathering votes necessary to pass their revised report. To reconcile Westerners from the Mountain States to the reductions in lumber and hides the Senate rate of 2⅛ cents on lead bullion was restored and quick counsel was taken with the insurgents of all complexions.

Rage in Speaker's Room.

In the Speaker's room news of the President's ultimatum was received with evidence of rage, but not for a moment was its significance doubted. Before the House convened Mr. Littauer and the Speaker knew that the game was up and visitors who were in the room say Mr. Littauer, whose face is of the flexible type, was the picture of collapse.

Later in the afternoon Mr. Cannon had a conference with Mr. Aldrich, and when he came out his long experience in political ups and downs enabled him to assume his usual smiling expression and his anecdotal manner.

"Jehosaphat!" he exclaimed when questioned as to the situation. "I don't know. I'm not a conferree."

But already he had been in consultation with his friend Littauer, with Representative Dalzell, who is a conferree, and with Parliamentary Expert Asher Hinds. With the consent of the Democratic conferrees the report will be introduced at noon to-morrow instead of allowing twenty-four hours to the Democrats in which to study it, and will be taken up in earnest under the special rule Saturday.

Iron ore has definitely been fixed at 15 cents a ton and coal at 45 cents a short ton. Increases of about 20 per cent. over existing law are allowed by the conference on the three important grades of hosiery manufactured in this country. As described by a conferree to-night these are the grades valued at $1, $1.50, and $2 a dozen. On these the advance over the Dingley law is about 20 per cent., a considerable reduction from the sweeping increases of the House bill. On other valuations the rates remain unchanged.

Around the committee through the day drifted steadily little groups of men making a last effort at modifying the conference report. Several lumber lobbyists were there calling on Mr. Fordney, their stanchest supporter. Mr. Gillette of Massachusetts was called in to help in some way, and even Mr. Borah, who in certain directions is an insurgent, was with the conference for a time, presumably in a discussion of the Western vote.

WE NOW PRESS CHINA FOR REPLY ON LOAN

Washington Thinks Time Enough for Answer to Demands Has Been Allowed.

EUROPEANS DENY INTRIGUE

Ex-Minister Rockhill Reports That China Is Friendly and That Reform Pledges Are Being Kept.

PEKING, July 29.—Henry P. Fletcher, Secretary of the American Legation, to-day sent an inquiry to the Chinese Foreign Board as to whether China had any communication to make with regard to American participation in the railway loan. The United States Government considers that a reasonable time has elapsed for the consideration of this matter and the formulation of a reply. It is understood that the Foreign Board will now interrogate the three nations, Great Britain, France, and Germany, originally interested in the loan.

It appears that the agreement drawn up in London on July 7 by the British, French, and German bankers prevented them from giving a definite answer to China on the subject of American participation, and also prevented them from meeting the American demands. This agreement was for a period of three years, the bankers making an effort to preserve unity, in the fear that a disagreement might prevent the loan settlement. The banks to-day gave out through the British bank here a "refutation" of the charges of intrigue made against the German bank. It was agreed to publish the "refutation," which was merely a brief denial, in Great Britain and the United States, where the charges were circulated.

WASHINGTON, July 29.—With hopeful views for China's future, W. W. Rockhill, formerly Minister to that country, has returned to Washington preparatory to leaving for St. Petersburg as Ambassador. During his four years' residence in Peking, which is but a portion of the time he has spent in the Orient, Mr. Rockhill has been a close observer of the situation in China, and returns to this country believing that the country is progressing toward reforms in Governmental administration and is making an earnest effort to develop her vast natural resources. At the same time he points out that reforms necessarily work slowly because of the varying conditions throughout the vast empire, and says it will take years before many of the urgent problems now facing China can be settled.

Prospects of an absolute adherence to the reforms pledge, harmonious relations with foreigners and friendship for them, prospects for a temporary improvement in the monetary situation, a decrease in the use of opium, development of educational reform, and the necessity of American manufacturers taking a more direct interest in the trade of this country with China are among the impressions gained by Mr. Rockhill.

"The policy of reform promulgated by the late Empress Dowager and the Emperor some time before their sudden deaths is being carried out by the Prince Regent," Mr. Rockhill said, "and all observers, I think, agree that the present Government will adhere absolutely to the pledges given by them. In every part of the country the progress in harmony with the programme of the Government is manifest to the most casual observer."

Considerable emphasis is laid by the former Minister on the consistently friendly attitude displayed by the Chinese toward foreigners of all nationalities, particularly Americans. During the four years he had charge of the American mission in China, said Mr. Rockhill, but one serious outrage on missionaries occurred, and that was settled promptly and satisfactorily by the Chinese Government. China, according to Mr. Rockhill, is willing and would be delighted to see a tremendous increase in the volume of American trade.

Mr. Rockhill commented on the efforts the Chinese are making toward the education of the masses, and incidentally referred to the promise of the Government to expend the portion of the Boxer indemnity remitted by the United States in the education of Chinese students in this country. He was sure this would establish a strong bond of amity between the two nations. The action of the United States in this matter had been universally commended by the native press and by the people. Americans are taking by far the leading part in the work of educational progress.

JAPANESE ROYALTY MAY COME

Prince and Princess Kuni May Attend Hudson-Fulton Celebration.

TOKIO, July 29.—Japan will be represented by royalty at the tri-centennial of the discovery of the Hudson River, according to the belief current here.

The Japanese Court will probably be represented by Prince and Princess Kuni, who are now touring Europe. The couple will leave London for New York Aug. 25.

JAPANESE STAYING OUT.

Canadian Commissioner Reports That Tokio Is Keeping Agreement.

OTTAWA, Ontario, July 29.—Canada's Trade Commissioner in Japan, Mr. G. A. Harris, reports to the Trade and Commerce Department that the official emigration figures of the Japanese Government for the first five months of this year show that Japan is fully living up to the agreements with Canada and the United States to restrict Japanese emigration to this continent.

Up to the end of May the total Japanese emigration to America was 718, as compared with 2,275 for the same period of last year. The total of emigration to Canada was only 184.

BARMEN-ELBERFELD, Germany, July 29.—The world's conference of Young Men's Christian Associations to-day was devoted to reports from all nations. That of the United States evoked the greatest enthusiasm. This report showed that there are 1,934 organizations, 446,000 members, and $50,000,000 of Young Men's Christian Association property in that country. The figures for the entire world are 7,823 organizations, 821,000 members, and $60,000,000 in property.

While none may explain the psychological reasons for it, still, none will deny that the man who knows his apparel to be beyond criticism, rarely fears to "step in" anywhere.

FRANCIS G. BAILEY PUT IN JAIL HERE

Sailed with Pirate Ship Laden with Goods to Make Fortune in South America.

MADE A MISTAKE, HE ADDS

Should Have Engaged the Honduran Gunboat That Captured the Goldsboro a Year Ago.

Francis G. Bailey, once President of the Importers' Shipping Company, at 9 and 11 Broadway, who sailed from this port in May, 1908, in the pirate ship Goldsboro, was brought back to Police Headquarters last night by Detectives Wilber and Price. His pirate ship was loaded with $150,000 worth of goods, $150,000 in gold, and still more golden dreams of wealth to be made in trading in South American countries.

On May 2, 1908, the old converted Clyde liner Goldsboro sailed out of this port. Creditors were looking everywhere for Bailey. With him were Albert W. Bailey, his brother, Secretary of the Importers' Shipping Company; Charles H. H. Myers, agent of the General Supply Company, through which some of the goods had been purchased; Capt. Albert Oxley, master of the Goldsboro, and a crew fit for the purpose.

The name of the old vessal was changed to the Atlanticida. She was heard of on May 23 at Puerto Cortez, Honduras. Meanwhile Bailey's bankrupt company had been taken over by a receiver, and the multitudinous creditors were clamoring for his arrest. The fancy named old craft was now flying any flag that came into the pirate chieftain's mind. Now it was the British, again the Honduran flag.

In June, 1908, a Honduran gunboat put out after the Atlanticida. Bailey now says that if he had only known that the gunboat thought of trying to take him and his ship he would have fought.

"We were stronger than that boat," he now says. "We could have licked her and sailed on. That was my greatest mistake."

The Honduran gunboat had received orders to take his ship, and arrest everybody on board. This was done. The two Baileys, the big and the little one; Myers, and Oxley were turned over to Detective Peter W. Beery, who was sent after them from New York. The ship and its cargo were made the subject of litigation by the creditors.

How Bailey Escaped.

Beery took his prisoners on board the Norwegian steamer Utstein, bound for New Orleans, but at Puerto Cortez, Honduras, while Beery was asleep, Francis G. Bailey, confiscating the only dory possessed by the Utstein, rowed to shore, and was apparently wiped off the face of the earth. Beery brought his three other prisoners to New York. He was duly tried for the pirate chief's escape, suffering the penalty of dismissal from the force.

While Bailey had occupied his model Flatbush home, where his life was that of a blameless householder, for many a quiet and uneventful year, he had studied the extradition laws of all the countries. He had decided that he was safest in Honduras or Honduran waters. After his first plans fell through he began planning some more while he wandered from place to place.

He had many loyal friends here. They kept him posted about the charges that were being made against him. The actions of the police, so far as they could be learned, were conveyed to him by letter. The police were so afraid of his friends that when they did start a man out to find Bailey again they made him take the name of Frederick S. Marsden, and his departure was a secret.

Ultimately the pirate chieftain struck the east coast of Canada. He worked his way across the country. He was studying the Canadian extradition laws in connection with the charges known to have been made against him here. He decided that even if arrested in British Columbia he could fight extradition, with large chances of winning. He was right at that time. But the law was amended, even while he planned.

He came to a halt at Whonock, not far from Vancouver, British Columbia. He bought a ranch, but it was in the name of Miss Katherine Maude Slocum, a teacher in the Ninth Avenue Public School, with "Col. Edward Shannon Kirkconnell" as trustee. The pirate chief was the Colonel. He set out to make a model ranchman and farmer, even as he had been a model Flatbush householder in Brooklyn for so many years, with his shaved lawn and rubber plant.

Detective Wilber bears witness to the fact that in less than a year he had shown that he was capable of making good in his new rôle. He introduced irrigation in that section of the woods, and worked hard alongside his employes, whose labors he directed personally.

But the Colonel had been writing too much to Miss Slocum. In some way the police came to know about these letters. They were traced back to Whonock, which the police were able to find on the latest maps of British Columbia. Early in June Wilber, under the name of Marsden, was ordered to go to Whonock and see if it was really Bailey, the pirate chief.

A Night in the Woods.

At Vancouver the Chief of Police offered him assistance. When Wilber started out to the Colonel's ranch at Whonock Constables Smith and Monroe of the Province police went with him. That was on June 28. As the three got near the ranch Wilber advised that they go out in the woods and look at the fugitive as he worked in his field.

They saw a Japanese laborer working by the side of a man with long hair and long beard. This person looked the part of a farmer-ranchman, born and bred. Darkness came on before Wilber was able to make up his mind whether this bewhiskered person was the Bailey whose picture he held in his hand. The three decided to spend that night in the woods, and watch Bailey the next day.

"The mosquitos up there are as big as chicken hawks," said Wilber last night, "and twice as fierce."

The next morning, when the Colonel started to work in his field, Wilber approached him, leaving his confederates near by. He asked how to get to an imaginary ranch, and then accepted an invitation to talk a while to the Colonel on the front porch of his two-room log cabin.

"Did you ever go under the name of Bailey?" asked Wilber after he had talked about commonplace matters for a while.

"No, Sir," snapped his host.

"Didn't you do an export business at 9 and 11 Broadway, New York City, for a number of years?" asked the sleuth.

"You've got me mixed up," answered the Colonel uneasily.

"Well, isn't this your picture, taken when you were in business in New York, when you were living in Flatbush, and before the days of the pirate ship?" asked Wilber, pulling out the picture.

The aging ex-chief of the pirate ship contemplated the picture of the well-fed, well-groomed man of less than middle age for two or three minutes. Handing it back he said:

"I'll go back. There won't be any use of extradition papers."

The three pursuers and their captive took a night train back to Vancouver, arriving there on June 30. Bailey's lawyer at once interfered, holding that his client could not be extradited on the charges standing against him.

"I planned for that," said Bailey to Wilber. "That's the reason I wanted you to stop in Vancouver."

Wilber at once wired to the Police Commissioner that his prisoner was going to fight. Lieut. Frank Price was hurried to Albany to get papers from Gov. Hughes on the ground that Bailey was a fugitive from justice.

Law Ensnared Him.

Meanwhile, after a week's wrangling, Bailey was told that the law he had depended on had been amended. He saw that he would be defeated, and so agreed to come back to this country. On July 18 Wilbert started for Seattle, where he was joined by Price. The three arrived at Police Headquarters last night at 5:30 o'clock. Wilber said that all the time Bailey was under arrest he had been handcuffed to some officer.

Bailey was written on the police books last night as one charged with the larceny of a driller and of a note, but these were simply to hold him temporarily. Soon after he sailed away nearly a hundred creditors met and made accusations against him. His brother, who was caught last year, is now in Sing Sing.

The ex-chief of the pirate ship told the two detectives on the way back to the city that he was penniless. He looked the part, they said, and they could not find that he had any money in Canada. He said last night that he was 39 years old and homeless. In addition to goods, he carried away in his ship only last year all the money he had in four banks, out of one of which he drew $50,000. He also drew and had cashed sight drafts on his foreign agents.

Bailey came to New York nine years ago. He was at that time connected with the Oliver Steel Company, for whose railroad he was Traffic Manager. He organized the Export Shipping Company under the laws of New Jersey, with a capital stock of $100,000. In 1902 Albert W., his brother, who had been running a ranch in Colorado, joined the company as Secretary. It did a thriving and legitimate business for years. It was recommended three or four years ago by the Department of Commerce and Labor.

The Goldsboro and her cargo were turned over to the receiver.

NO KNOWN SIR HALEY WYLAND

And No Record of Marriage of Jeanne Vermorel at Somerset House.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, July 29.—With regard to reports which have reached here of the marriage of Jeanne Vermorel and "Sir" Haley Wyland, no record of any such marriage is discoverable at Somerset House, where, if the wedding had taken place in any of the central districts of London on July 19, the record would have been filed by this time.

While it cannot be definitely stated that such a marriage has not been contracted at one of the outlying district Registry offices, it's certain that there is neither knight nor Baronet of the name of Haley Wyland known to the Heralds' College.

GATHER FOR EVANS MILLIONS.

Heirs of Taft's Landlord Will Divide $12,000,000 at Mrs. Evans's Death.

ST. JOHN, N. B., July 29.—The fortune of $12,000,000 which Robert D. Evans, who died in Boston a few weeks ago, amassed after leaving his home near here a poor boy will be considerably scattered at the death of Mrs. Evans, to whom the estate was left in trust. The provision that the great sum is to be divided among the heirs of Mr. and Mrs. Evans at the latter's death has resulted in the cropping up of more than twoscore persons, each of whom claims to be a legal heir. Mr. Evans had no children.

Most of the relatives here are first cousins of Mr. Evans. At the time of his death he was the landlord of President Taft at Beverly, Mass. He was prominent in mining circles of the United States and was also one of the organizers and a former President of the United States Rubber Company. His home was in Boston.

INDIAN TROUBLE SLIGHT.

Canadian Commissioners Expect to Overcome Dissatisfaction in Northwest

Special to The New York Times.

OTTAWA, July 29.—Official investigation shows that the condition of unrest among the Indians of Northern British Columbia and the bordering United States territory is not so serious as was reported.

The trouble has been due to the protest of the Indians against the invasion of the whites into their ancient precincts, and some of the chiefs, led by Capilano, have been endeavoring to convince the Indians that they are being robbed of their lands.

The Canadian Government has sent out two Commissioners to complete the mapping of the Indian reservations, and they expect that the explanations given to the Indians will smooth over the trouble.

A wireless message was received here last night saying that Gen. Marcelino Vargas, former Secretary of State for the Republic of Colombia under President Reyes, is due at this port to-day aboard the steamer Prinz Eitel Friedrich.

Gen. Vargas, with his wife and two daughters, is on his way from Bogota to Paris, where he will serve as Colombian Minister to France, an appointment he recently received. This being his first visit to this country, the General and his party will make a trip to Niagara Falls and other Eastern points of interest before sailing for Havre.

HOW DO YOU WASH YOUR CURTAINS?

There are twenty wrong ways; only one right way.

The right way is easy. The wrong ways are hard; hard on the curtains; doubly hard on the temper.

This is the right way:

Shake and brush curtains to remove the dust. Mend breaks. Soak in Ivory Soap suds and cold water for two hours, or over night if that is more convenient. Work the curtains gently up and down in the water and squeeze them between the hands to get the dirt out. Put them into clean warm suds with ammonia added, and keep changing the water until the curtains are clean. Never wring curtains by hand; lay them on a strip of cloth and put carefully through the wringer. Rinse well in several waters, and put through hot, moderately thick starch. If the curtains are white, the starch should be blued; if cream colored, strong coffee should be added to it. Two or three curtains may be dried at the same time on one frame. If you have no frame, lay clean sheets over the floor of an unused room, stretch the curtains into shape and pin each point so that it will not slip. If points are out of shape when dry, they may be dampened with a cloth and ironed.

$10,000 BENEFIT FOR CHILD CRIPPLES

Twenty Thousand Persons Cheer Sports by Theatrical Folk at Polo Grounds.

STARS OUT IN COSTUME

Erlanger in a Baseball Suit Boxes a Three-Round Bout—Wise Takes a Valet to Run Bases.

Up at the Polo Grounds yesterday afternoon Abraham Erlanger, the head of the theatrical syndicate, clad in a jaunty striped baseball suit, boxed a three-round bout with "Sam" Berger, James J. Jeffries's trainer and sparring partner, while 20,000 persons cheered. That was only one of several dozen events which went to make up the most attractive programme the theatrical folk of the city have given to help along the inmates of the New York Home for Destitute Crippled Children.

Raymond Hitchcock ran the wrong way in the 100-yard dash, open to actors; "Fred" Stone, in his scarecrow make-up from "The Wizard of Oz," caught fouls in a bird cage; Tom Wise, looking just as he does in "The Gentleman from Mississippi," stopped at every base for refreshments, and had to be assisted around the diamond by his valet, who fanned the actor with a large palm-leaf fan meanwhile.

Then Dorothy Newell, a chorus girl from "The Motor Girl" company, was saved in the nick of time by a band of handsome cowboys just as old White Eagle of the tribe of Sioux now giving a performance at the Palisades Amusement Park across the river, was going to marry her, and Harry Kelly, made up to look like Roosevelt, shot several big toy balloons.

The parade started from the New Amsterdam Theatre, where the theatrical folk got under way for the ball grounds. In the first place, all the performers appeared in the costumes which they wear in their parts on the stage, even to the chorus girls in short skirts and enormous hats. It took sixteen large sight-seeing autos and thirty-five taxicabs to hold the aggregation. There were three bands in the lead, the Catholic Cathedral Military Band of seventy-five pieces, the Hebrew Sheltering Guardian Orphan Asylum Band of fifty pieces, and the Cohan & Harris Minstrels. Nothing just like the sensation that was caused when this procession moved up Broadway has been seen in New York in years. There were only two runaways and no one was hurt in either.

When the procession reached the Polo Grounds it circled twice about the inclosure with Mr. Erlanger, in baseball costume, James J. Jeffries and "Sam" Berger in the lead. That was the signal for the crowd to break loose. After the leaders came "Tom" Wise, Raymond Hitchcock, dressed up as the King in "The Mascot"; Eddie Foy and his entire family of eight children, all in white; McIntyre and Heath in darky make up carrying a prodigious watermelon, Consul, the monkey, in a duck suit between "Harry" Disbecker and "Eddie" Pidgeon, and a horde of others, including half a dozen baseball teams, Indians, cowboys, and chorus girls from every musical show in town.

The events were run off rapidly, beginning with the star attraction, the "near" baseball game between the actors and managers. Abraham Erlanger was the captain of the managers and George M. Cohan led the actors. In the latter team were Tom Lewis, Victor Moore, Harry Kelly, Raymond Hitchcock, Tom Wise, Thomas W. Riley, and those on the managers' team included Abraham Erlanger, Sam Hurtig, Fred Bailey, Louis Werba, and Sam Harris.

Mr. Erlanger was the first batter up. He was worried a great deal by the way Fred Stone in his scare-crow make-up persisted in getting in front of him and catching the ball in the bird cage before it crossed the plate. Consul started the game by throwing the ball to George Cohan, and "Battling Nelson" was umpire. Everybody was laughing too heartily to keep track of the score, and even the players were overcome when Tom Wise singled to left centre and started for first.

After that the events came fast. Annette Kellermann performed marvelous feats at diabolo. Effie Hartwell stood on her head on the highest peak of the grand stand, Mabelle Meaker of "The Midnight Sons" company did the cartwheel, Cameroni made the slide for life on the wire rope, and then came the rescue of Dorothy Newell from the Indians.

Miss Newell, who is in "The Motor Girl" company, was initiated into the tribe as White Rose, and when the Big Chief wanted to marry her right there on the green the cowboys galloped down and carried her across the field on a broncho. There was a 100-yard dash by advance agents, which was won by Harry Middleton of the Grace Van Studdiford company; a chorus girl race, won by Zelda Schnall of "The Motor Girl" company, and an actors' race won by James F. Cook.

Every few minutes there was also a boxing match. Most of them were "hippodrome" affairs, but one genuine bout took place between "Billy" Glover and "Jack" Elliott. Another fast round was between "Jack" Goodman and "Battling" Nelson, but the main pugilistic event was when Abraham Erlanger put on the gloves with "Sam" Berger.

There were so many photographers around the combatants that the crowd in the grand stand couldn't see what was going on. James J. Jeffries, the referee, announced that honors were even. Then came an obstacle race between chorus girls, won by a girl from "The Beauty Spot," a fifty-yard dash by prima donnas, a pie-eating contest, a race between Friars, won by Charlie Peters, and a race between members of the Vaudeville Comedy Club, in which Joe Kane came in winner. Sandwiched in between the other events was a baseball game, in which the chorus girls of "The Follies of 1909" took part.

By the time the greased pig was let loose the crowd had got away from Joe Humphreys, the master of ceremonies, and surged over the field. The pig wasn't captured until it had upset half a dozen chorus girls and the refreshment table. Another event which pleased the crowd was a one-inning baseball game by Eddie Foy and his eight children.

Just when the excitement was liveliest, Mrs. Sophie M. Lobinger, the leader of the suffragettes who were trying to sell programmes and buttons in the crowd, climbed on a chair and made a speech. Mrs. Lobinger had asked Walter Kingsley, manager of the benefit, if he couldn't arrange to have her and her associates "mobbed." He did his best, but all the crowd would volunteer was a few feeble boos. After this vain attempt to steal some of the limelight, the suffragettes gave up and retired into the background.

The last event was a baseball game between members of the Friars and the Vaudeville Comedy Club, which was never finished. After the day's receipts were counted up it was announced that nearly $10,000 had been taken in. Not a little of it was obtained by several hundred chorus girls, who sold programmes.

Find Body of Fremont Survivor.

DENVER, July 29.—The body of Wolden Bledsoe, aged 91 years, said to be the last survivor of Gen. Frémont's first expedition to California, was found early to-day in the Archer Lake Canal in this city. It is believed he committed suicide. Bledsoe had led a hermit's life for years.

COULDN'T SEE HIM SUFFER.

Wife Asked Girl Whom Husband Wooed to Argue with Him.

A strange story of how a wife, to dry the tears of her husband, called in the girl with whom he was in love and who had spurned his attentions was told yesterday in the Gates Avenue Court, Brooklyn. The man in the case, who lives in Madison Street, had been summoned to court by Miss Erna Soller of 706 Putnam Avenue, who charged him with annoying her.

Miss Soller met the man about a year ago and he became attentive to her. She believed him to be a bachelor, but later learned that he was living with his wife and two children in Madison Street. She was highly indignant when she made this discovery and warned the man to cease his attentions to her.

The unmasked man was so affected by this that he did nothing but mope around the house, wringing his hands and weeping bitterly. Learning the cause of his grief, his wife asked Miss Soller, so it was asserted, to call and try to talk her errant spouse out of his fit of despondency. The dejected one, however, had to struggle out of the depths of his despair unaided.

He continued to annoy Miss Soller, and she had him summoned to court. When he was held for examination, the lachrimose one again broke down and wept to such an extent that the court officers were in fear of getting their feet wet.

MORE JAIL FOR COHEN.

In Ludlow Street Now and a Third Wife Is Proceeding Against Him.

Mrs. Celia Cohen, the third wife of Joseph C. Cohen, a corset manufacturer at 289 Grand Street, and living at 604 Eastern Parkway, Brooklyn, who was granted a divorce two years ago, obtained an order from Supreme Court Justice Bischoff yesterday, directing Cohen, now in Ludlow Street Jail, to show cause why he should not be adjudged in contempt of court for failure to pay alimony arrears of $800.

Cohen was arrested last Monday for failure to pay a judgment of $5,170 against him for the alienation of the affections of Mrs. Hyman Rappaport, who was named as a co-respondent in Mrs. Cohen's suit, and was her chief witness. By the decree Mrs. Cohen was allowed $75 a week alimony and a house at 402 Lexington Avenue.

A year ago Cohen married again, taking Miss Minnie Kaufman, a music teacher, as his fourth wife. She is now suing him for a separation, and the day following his commitment to Ludlow Street Jail served him with an order to show cause why he should not pay her $20 a week pending the trial of her action.

11TH AVE. TRACKS IN COURT.

New York Central Would Plead That Their Removal Would Cost Heavily.

Decision was reserved by Supreme Court Justice Brady yesterday on the application of the city to strike out certain paragraphs from the complaint of the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad Company in its efforts to restrain Borough President Ahearn from tearing up the Eleventh Avenue tracks.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Burr said that the question to be brought before the court later was simply a matter of law. The question was: "Did the City of New York in 1847 have the right to grant the Hudson River Railroad a perpetual franchise for the Eleventh Avenue tracks, or did the city have the right when the New York Central and the Hudson River Roads were consolidated, in 1859, to grant a franchise for Eleventh Avenue for 500 years?"

Counsel for the railroad said the paragraphs objected to showed the great loss which the railroad company would be put to if the tracks were removed. He contended that the city was not harmed by the allegations showing this loss.

TO MOVE CAMPBELL'S BODY.

Widow of Late Congressman Wants It Buried in Greenwood.

A question whether the body of Congressman Timothy J. Campbell, famous politically some years ago, should stay in a grave in Calvary Cemetery or be disinterred and reburied in Greenwood was made an issue yesterday before Justice Stapleton in the Supreme Court, Brooklyn.

Mr. Campbell was a Catholic, and when he died was buried in a Catholic cemetery. His widow, Mrs. Margaretta D. Campbell, who is a Protestant, has asked the court to be permitted to remove the body. It was said that no question of religion entered into the matter. A fund of $800 for the erection of a monument to the late Congressman had been raised. The widow and some of the former friends of the old-time east side politician seemed to think that a more desirable site for the grave and monument could be obtained in Greenwood Cemetery. After hearing argument, Justice Stapleton took the papers and reserved decision.

BADLY BITTEN PARTING DOGS.

Man Who Turned Bulldog Loose to Fight Held for Assault.

James Simpson of 1,322 Amsterdam Avenue has a bulldog known in the neighborhood as the Terror. The Mazzola brothers, who run a fruit stand at 125th Street and Amsterdam Avenue, also have a dog which they call Rigoletto. There has long been a controversy between Simpson and the Mazzolas as to which dog it was that had been stealing meat from the butcher shops in the neighborhood.

Last night Simpson passed the fruit stand with his dog in leash. The brothers accused the Terror of stealing the meat. Simpson slipped the leash from his dog. Instantly he sprang upon the fruit dealer's dog, and the two animals fought desperately.

In trying to separate them the Mazzola brothers were badly bitten about the legs. Their wounds were cauterized by an ambulance surgeon. Simpson was promptly arrested and locked up on a charge of assault.

FIND CHILD IN CHINATOWN.

Chinese Say White Girl of 9 Is Daughter of Chinaman.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 29.—A white girl, 9 years old, who cannot speak a word of English, was taken from a basement in Chinatown yesterday by the police, where she is supposed to have been kept for some years by a Chinese couple.

Although apparently not mistreated, the child has rarely seen the sunlight, and evidently was kept in close confinement in the dark and dingy basement, with only a half-starved puppy for a playmate.

The Chinese couple in whose place she was found declared that little Mah Hos's mother was a woman who married a Chinese, but who died when the child was young.

The case of Raymond Pielago of Havana, who arrived in New York last Saturday on the French liner Lorraine and failed to declare some jewelry he had in his overcoat pockets, has been settled. It has been decided to let him keep the jewelry on the payment of the regular duties, between $500 and $600. Pielago asserted he intended to present the jewelry to his fiancée in Havana.

Memorial to Bedrich Smetana.

ALBANY, July 29.—The Bedrich Smetana Association, which was organized in New York for the purpose of raising by subscriptions a fund for the erection in New York City of a bust or monument to Bedrich Smetana, founder of modern Bohemian music, was incorporated to-day. It is proposed to present the memorial to the city. The Directors include Anton Latrepalck, Emil Pola, and L. C. Frank of New York.

FRIENDS AT LAST FOR THE ESTREINS

Charity Organizations Coldly Turned Children Away, but Honest Mothers Didn't.

TRIALS OF A LITTLE GIRL

Only Ten Years Old, but She Must "Mother" Three Babies and Three Small Sisters.

A thin, tired little girl of 10, with black eyes under which were dark rings, seated in the corner of a dirty, dark room with a baby in her lap; two other babies, the soles of whose little bare feet were black from the dust on the floor, toddling about; three other little girls, the oldest 9, in soiled pink frocks, worn shoes, and little else, sitting with smudged, pinched faces on a pile of dirty mattresses—that was what any one would have seen at 2 P. M. yesterday had he entered Abraham Estrein's flat at 1,651 Bathgate Avenue, the Bronx.

That was the sight they might have seen any day for four months, though the children have grown thinner steadily, and the eyes of the girl that held the baby more troubled looking, and the rooms more squalid. For ever since the littlest baby of the three "bottle babies" of the family was born, five months ago, Mrs. Estrein has lain in Fordham Hospital recovering from one operation after another, and 10-year-old Edith, with the dark rings under her eyes, has played little mother to the seven other children. She is oldest but for Frank, who is 12.

All the children—all were girls in the room—are pinched with hunger, but evidently Edith, the worried-looking little mother, with her well-shaped nose, her Madonna-like chin, and mouth, and her weary black eyes, is the greatest sufferer. Plainly, she was in pain, and around her head, under her chin, was wound a dirty rag. What was the matter? Her ear pained her: it had kept getting worse for a week. Had she seen a doctor? She shook her head.

She held a milk bottle to the baby's lips, and with her heels hooked over the rung of her plain kitchen chair, and the knees of her thin little legs pressed together, she went on listlessly feeding it. One of the other babies, Esther, curly haired, a bit over a year old, climbed up with the help of nine-year-old Fannie to her high chair, and now she was wriggling around.

"Fannie," said the little mother in a soft voice, "Esther will fall."

The little mother didn't overlook much, but she had too big a contract on her thin little shoulders—three bottle babies—a bottle apiece went two hours—and three little sisters.

The bottle babies managed to get about half as much milk as they needed—five-months-old Herman was nearly a skeleton, still he had a smile for every one he saw—on the $8 that Abraham Estrein got every week for his work in a machine shop from 5 A. M. till 7 P. M., but no one else got much—a few crackers and a little bread and water each day.

But at last the family had found friends. Two women bustled in about 3 in the afternoon. One looked needy enough herself, with her own thin baby in her arms. She was Mrs. Ida Morris, who lives on the same floor. Four children she had and a crippled husband, but she alone in the house could help Edith.

"We have children of our own," the other said.

The other was large and motherly looking—Mrs. Pastor of 1,656 Washington Avenue, mother of Rose Pastor Stokes. She had looked in as often as she could since she heard of the destitute children.

"Send them to the charities!" she exclaimed. "We've tried all of 'em. They can't take children that are not orphans, or at least half orphans. We tried to send the baby away to a Hebrew charity, and they took him, but sent him back. They could keep him but his mother must be with him, they said. But there would be no need of charity if the mother was able to go anywhere.

It was then suggested to Mrs. Pastor that she lay the case before the New York Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, known to every child in New York as the Gerry Society, in honor of its founder. But she shook her head deprecatingly and said:

"The Gerry Society? A man from that was here, but he said that as the mother was alive and the father not a drunkard, he could do nothing." So, the father being a hard worker instead of a drunken loafer, the children had to go on starving until real friends appeared.

Mrs. Pastor brought in milk, and the other babies had some. Then Edith got out a tin bathtub, and Mrs. Pastor gave each baby a bath. Somebody had read of the children's plight in the papers, and had sent $1. The little ones were put to sleep, all on one of the three untidy, rickety beds, with Mrs. Morris to watch. Mrs. Pastor with the $1 took the other children out for a meal—they had so far lived that day on a few biscuits, most of which they saved; though, as Edith said, "Bertha wants to eat all the food—then she would have none the next day." She said this with an indulgent smile, as one who could excuse such carelessness in a mere child.

They all sat down in Mrs. Goodman's restaurant, at 3,909 Third Avenue. They had soup, the first in months, and meat, a rare treat, indeed, and potatoes. They ate seriously, with their serious black eyes looking at each other and shining, and only Edith could cut her own meat. Then Mrs. Goodman refused flatly to take any money whatever; and, what was more, she promised as good a meal every day at that hour for nothing.

Then Mrs. Pastor wanted to take Edith to a doctor. She wouldn't go till Fannie's toothache was attended to, and Fannie was taken to Dr. Barry Queen of 505 Wendover Avenue. He did some good and promised to do more, and he, too, refused to take money for it, having read of the children.

Edith was next taken to a doctor. He looked at her ear, and in examining it hurt her so she moaned and tears came into her eyes. He said: "It is badly inflamed. It should be treated every two hours; an abscess is likely to develop; there may have to be an operation."

Some one took the child to Fordham Hospital, where her mother was. There they said she was not a hospital case, but a dispensary case, and sent her away in pain, telling her to come the next day at 2, and she went bravely home to the other children. Her father was there, doing what he could after fourteen hours' toil, to get the household in order, and Edith set about to help him.

"If I could only hire a woman," said the father, "we could get along." He looked at Edith, busy with a baby. "But how can I afford it—my job will only last one week more, I think."

GIRL IS MORTALLY BURNED.

Matches Ignite Her Clothing While She Was Playing in the Street.

While Hilda Samose, 11 years old, of 55 East 101st Street was playing with a box of matches with several companions of her own age in the rear yard of the tenement where she lives shortly after 6 o'clock yesterday evening, the entire box suddenly became ignited, and the flames caught the girl's light pinafore.

Her comrades ran away terrified, while the child rushed wildly to and fro in the narrow yard, the flames spreading every moment. Several women shouted instructions to her from neighboring windows, but were too terrified to come to her aid.

Finally Patrolman Merkle of the East 104th Street Police Station, hearing her cries, ran to where she was and stifled the flames with his coat. But Dr. Hoffman of the Mount Sinai Hospital, just across the street, where the policeman hurried her, said that the little girl would probably die.

ONLY $18,000 A YEAR FOR HIM.

Court Refuses to Increase the Allowance of Burnett Y. Tiffany.

Supreme Court Justice Bischoff decided against Burnett Y. Tiffany, son of the late Charles L. Tiffany of Tiffany & Co., in his action to compel his brother, Louis C. Tiffany, and brother-in-law, Alfred Mitchell, as trustees of his father's will, to allow him more than $18,000 a year. He also wanted the executors enjoined from going below that sum in any future allowance, and asked for a receiver to take over the principal of the funds and accumulation of income, with power to administer them under the court's direction.

By the will of his father a trust fund was provided for him and the executors given full power over it, which permitted them to give him any sum they saw fit. They decided on $18,000 and since then the matter has been in litigation time and time again. Tiffany later became bankrupt, and his creditors endeavored to collect from the trustees, but failed.

Louis C. Tiffany, in opposing the application, said his brother had been weak and vacillating in character since a child; that he was addicted to the use of liquor, and consorted with disreputable people. He said that his father had done all that was possible to get his son interested in the business of Tiffany & Co., and did have him there for a time, but his habits were such that he had to be withdrawn.

Counsel for Tiffany said that his client had been living a quiet life since his marriage to Lucilla Kaufman, the divorced wife of Sol Kaufman, and that at present he is free from the characteristics which led his father to insert the unusual provision in his will. He alleged that for a long time Louis had been "bitterly and unreasonably hostile toward the plaintiff, has publicly characterized him and his wife as 'thieves,' and as guilty of violent and criminal practices, and furthermore declared that the plaintiff's character would not and could not change for the better."

In his decision Justice Bischoff held that the provisions of the will of Mr. Tiffany gave absolute power to the trustees as to the amount the plaintiff was to receive.

EUSTIS TRAMPED ALL NIGHT.

Commissioner Aroused the Suspicion of the Bronx Police and Dogs.

The next time Public Service Commissioner Eustis feels it his duty to make an all-night vigil in the interests of his constituents of the Borough of the Bronx he will take pains to have the Police Department notify the patrolmen in the section that he is coming. Also, the Commissioner will make some effort to have the family watchdogs tied up or muzzled. He had an experience on Wednesday night that would tend to quiet the zeal of the most enthusiastic Commissioner.

This all came about because residents in the neighborhood of Sedgwick Avenue, between 161st and 165th Streets, complained that the switching yard of the Putnam Division of the New York Central Road down below the street, between the tracks and the Harlem River, was a nuisance. The locomotives were tooting their whistles and blowing off steam all night, and, altogether, life wasn't worth living in the vicinity. Complaint was made to the Public Service Commission, and Commissioner Eustis, who has Bronx matters under his special care, undertook to investigate.

About 11 o'clock Wednesday night he arrived in the Sedgwick Avenue neighborhood. He walked and walked and walked, and then walked some more. By 12 o'clock he had bounded, twice at least, every block in the territory from which the complaint had come. By 12:30 he had met the policeman on beat a sufficient number of times to believe that he must have had his suspicions aroused. By 1 o'clock he had persuaded four dogs that he was not a person to be trifled with. By 2 o'clock the policeman had met him a couple of times more, and did not respond pleasantly to the Commissioner's nod.

So it went on until daylight, the Commissioner wondering whether he would be arrested as a suspicious person before his vigil ended. He finally made good his escape from the neighborhood between 5 and 6 o'clock, having decided that the noise of the locomotives was not bad.

SHIPS MUST DODGE SHELLS.

Warned to Avoid Target Practice Area of the Atlantic Fleet.

Target practice of the Atlantic fleet may cause some trouble to coastwise shipping. Rear Admiral Seaton Schroeder of the Atlantic battleship fleet sent out the following notice to mariners yesterday:

"Target practice will be held by the ships of the United States Atlantic fleet off the entrance to Chesapeake Bay during August and September. During the period from Aug. 9 to Sept. 20 the target rafts will be moored in the positions here given, and mariners are cautioned against crossing that area at night.

"The area where the targets will be anchored is about ten mile square, the centre being about thirty-four miles southeast by east half east from Cape Henry Light. This area is westward of the direct route north and south between Cape Hatteras and the entrance to the Delaware, and outside of the routes of ships bound in from either the north or the south.

"The firing ground will cover a maximum possible area of about twenty miles square in that same neighborhood. No firing will be done during the presence or approach of any vessel near the lines of fire, but when it can be done without inconvenience ship masters are requested to avoid the ground, so as not to interrupt the practice."

ALGER STUDIES AVIATION.

Son of War Secretary Practices for Aeroplane on Motor Cycle.

Special to The New York Times.

DETROIT, Mich., July 29.—Russell A. Alger, son of the late Secretary of War, who lately purchased an aeroplane of Wright Brothers, is taking his first lessons in aviation, though he has not received the aeroplane yet.

He is learning first the art of balancing himself by use of a motor cycle, and has already had a thrilling adventure. He took the machine aboard his big automobile and started out Jefferson Avenue. Just beyond the business section of old Fairview he stopped and set up the motor cycle.

He told his chauffeur to pace him while he got used to the machine. They started. Suddenly the chauffeur heard the purr of the motor cycle alongside, and a moment more and Mr. Alger was cutting down the avenue at a sixty-mile gait. The chauffeur started in pursuit, but he could not overtake his employer. On they went, clear to Grosse Pointe and two miles up the Lake Shore Boulevard.

Then something went wrong with the gasoline feed, and the motor cycle stopped of its own accord. Mr. Alger had turned off the six miles in better than a mile a minute, and he now has taken lessons on how to stop the machine.

WIFE OF A BROKER HELD AS ELOPER

Jefferies, Painter, Her Companion, Said to Have Confessed Both Tried to Poison Berman.

FLED FROM ATLANTIC CITY

Berman Hired Jefferies to Paint His Cottage, He Says, and Artisan Made Love to Mrs. Berman.

READING, Penn., July 29.—Mrs. Alice Berman, the wife of Edward A. Berman, a New York broker, was arrested at the home of her parents here this afternoon on an elopement charge made by her husband. Francis Jefferies, an artisan painter, is now in the Doylestown Jail, charged with being the other party to the elopement. He is reported to have confessed that he and the woman tried to poison Mr. Berman, who had a Summer cottage at Atlantic City.

Jefferies, according to Berman's statement, turned the woman against her 55-year-old husband and got her to elope with him from Atlantic City on June 26.

Berman is a dealer in stocks and bonds at 6 Wall Street, New York. His wife was formerly Miss Alice Graul, and lived with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Graul, in this city. Seven years ago she met Berman in Philadelphia and not long after they were married. They traveled abroad much. Berman stated to detectives that frequently he allowed his wife to carry as much as $10,000 with her.

Early this Spring Berman took a cottage in Atlantic City, where he intended to spend the Summer with his wife. He engaged Francis Jefferies of Philadelphia to paint the house. Mrs. Berman was at the cottage at the time, and while Jefferies was working on the house he had frequent chats with his employer's wife. Finally, according to the husband, he got her to elope with him on June 26.

Upon reaching Reading, after they had pawned the woman's diamonds, Jefferies said that he would go to Doylestown and get some checks cashed. He left Mrs. Berman here with her mother, where Detective Harrison made the arrest. When arrested Mrs. Berman said that she thought that Jefferies loved her. She asserted she knew nothing of the alleged poisoning.

After her arrest on the elopement charge Mrs. Berman went before Alderman Miller, where bail was given for her appearance before Magistrate Call of Philadelphia. A warrant from New Jersey will now be issued for both, and it is likely that requisition papers will be used to take the pair back to Atlantic City for trial on the charge of poisoning.

Edward A. Berman was here to-day. He said that he provided everything that money could buy for his wife and believed that her mind was influenced against him by Jefferies. He returned to New York.

Previous to the elopement, according to the reported confession by Jefferies, Mrs. Berman and he put poison on some fish which was served to Berman, and he became ill. Physicians helped him, however.

Jefferies and Mrs. Berman went to Philadelphia, where they were finally located. Then they left Philadelphia. Warrants were placed in the hands of the Philadelphia police, who notified other cities of the State.

From Philadelphia the couple went to Scranton. They arrived on July 3, and on July 18 Jefferies paid his bill of $47 by giving a worthless check on the Doylestown Bank, it is charged, for $74, and received the change. The couple then left, but were reported to have been at other places in the coal regions before coming to Reading this week.

HOLLINGSWORTH INSISTS.

Wants to Know About Jefferson Davis and Mississippi's Silver Service.

WASHINGTON, July 29.—Jefferson Davis's name came up again in connection with the silver service presented to the battleship Mississippi, through the introduction in the House to-day of another resolution by Representative Hollingsworth requesting further information from the Secretary of the Navy regarding the presentation.

Mr. Hollingsworth adds another paragraph to his earlier resolution to the effect "it has been reported in the public press that a subaltern officer" of the Mississippi, while on shore duty June 1, 1909, assumed to accept "the silver service from some of Mr. Davis's friends on behalf of the Navy Department of the United States Government." He then requests the Secretary of the Navy to inform Congress whether such gift was accepted by any one, "and if so, how, by whom, and on what authority."

RATE FIGHT STILL ON.

Chesapeake & Ohio Cuts the Import Freight Tariff.

WASHINGTON, July 29.—Import freight rates from Atlantic seaboard points to Chicago and Central Traffic Association territory were reduced again to-day by a tariff filed with the Inter-State Commerce Commission by the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway. The tariff restores the differential heretofore existing for many years on import rates between Boston and the Ports of New York, Philadelphia, and Baltimore.

The filing of the tariff will be followed in a day or two by the filing of similar tariffs by the Eastern trunk lines, and means a continuance of the rate war between them and the Boston & Maine.

The rates on import traffic now are lower than they have ever been in the history of American railroading.

LYNN, Mass., July 29. — The packing room employes' strike which has been in progress here for a week past, was brought abruptly to a close to-day, when the Joseph Caunt Company signed an agreement with the strikers. This gave the strikers a victory in all of the four plants, where they struck for higher wages. At all other factories the scale was accepted.

HOW CHICAGO HOPES TO GROW

5,000,000 Expected by 1940—2,572,835 There Now.

CHICAGO, July 29.—Chicago will have a population of 5,000,000 in the year 1940, according to an estimate by City Statistician Francis A. Eastman in his city manual for the current year issued yesterday. The city has passed the half-way post on the road to that goal. The estimate is based on the gradual increases of population for the last few decades.

Of the 2,572,835 residents of the city, the report sets forth that 609,554 are Americans or persons whose parents are not foreign born. The Germans rank second with a population of 563,708, the Irish third with a population of 240,560. Then follow the Poles with 173,409, the Swedes with 143,307, the Russians with 123,238, and the Bohemians with 116,549. Thirty other foreign countries are each below the 100,000 mark. The Chinese population is given as 1,801, and the Japanese as 257. The Albanians are the lowest, with a population of thirty-nine.

THE FLEA CAN'T SEE.

Merely Notes a Varying Intensity of Light Rays, Says Savant.

BERKELEY, Cal., July 29.—After a series of experiments with the California flea, Prof. C. W. Woodworth of the University of California announced today that although that insect has eyes it does not see. To be more exact the professor stated that the flea does not see material objects, but merely sees a variation of the rays of lights when near an object.

"There is no formation of images on the retina of the eye of a flea," said Prof. Woodworth. "All the insect sees when it approaches a solid object is a varying intensity of light rays."

NIGHT RIDERS OUT AGAIN.

Cut Telephone Wires Near Clarksville, Tenn.—Sawmill Burned.

CLARKSVILLE, Tenn., July 29.—Night riders, or so it is presumed, were out again last night for the first time in several months. They cut the telephone wires of the Cumberland Company at Half Pond Creek.

Obe Clifton's sawmill a short distance away was destroyed by fire.

Dominion Coal Company Offers a Reward of $10,000 for Evidence.

GLACE BAY, C. B., July 29.—The Dominion Coal Company, near whose collieries there have been strike disorders, has offered a reward of $10,000 for information leading to the conviction of the persons who assaulted R. McPherson, an aged man, while he was going in the direction of one of the company's collieries on his way to attend his sister's funeral at Waterford.

The county authorities have offered $500 for information regarding the persons who attempted to blow up the residence of Manager Simpson of a Dominion Company colliery, and an equal amount for information as to the persons who exploded a bomb at the Gardner mines on Wednesday last.

NAME KENT FOR GOVERNOR.

Virginia Republicans Indorse Local Option and the Payne-Aldrich Tariff.

NEWPORT NEWS, Va., July 29.—William P. Kent of Wythe County, present Consul General to Guatemala, was nominated by acclamation for Governor of Virginia by the Republican Convention here to-day. His was the only name actually presented to the convention.

Other nominations were: Lieutenant Governor, State Senator A. T. Lincoln, by acclamation; Attorney General, G. A. Rivircomb; State Treasurer, J. L. Krupper; Secretary of the Commonwealth, John B. Locke; Commissioner of Agriculture, J. T. Robinson; Superintendent of Public Instruction, F. P. Brent. The Republican caucus had previously agreed upon a slate in which Congressman C. Bascom Slemp was proposed as Governor. Mr. Slemp was not anxious to run.

The Prohibitionists gained a decided victory when they secured the adoption by a vote of 700 to 310 of an amendment to the liquor plank offered by the Resolutions Committee merely favoring local option, high license, and the rigid enforcement of the law providing for the application of the unit rule in counties and cities on all elections on the liquor question.

The platform indorses the party principles as announced in the National platform, as well as the Tariff bill now pending in Congress. The policy of the National Administration also is approved.

TIDE OF OCEAN TRAVEL TURNS.

Rush Home from Europe—Kronprinzessin Cecelie Has 900 Passengers.

The westward tide of travel is now setting in, and the great crowd of Americans who have spent the season abroad will soon be arriving. The homeward rush will keep up until well into September. Each incoming steamship will be crowded.

The North German Lloyd Line steamship Kronprinzessin Cecilie, due to arrive on Tuesday from Bremen and Channel ports, will bring almost 900 cabin passengers, of whom about 500 are in the first cabin and more than 300 in the second.

The opening of the schools in September is largely responsible for the early homecoming of many. As usual, the steamship bookings during the months of August and September will be heavy.

CALLS COURT HOT AND DIRTY.

Grand Jury Criticises Essex Market—Would End Bail for Babies.

The July Grand Jury, in closing the term yesterday, handed down a presentment to Judge Rosalsky, criticising conditions in Essex Market Court, and recommending that Ludlow Street Jail be used in future as the prison pen. The committee assigned to investigate was guided by Magistrate House, who, in giving his opinion of the sanitary conditions, said of the jail that it was "worse than the Black Hole of Calcutta."

The report states that the court is "hot and filthy, the atmosphere almost intolerable, bad, and unhealthy," and that the cell assigned to women is in such a condition that it would not be tolerated in Turkey."

The Grand Jury further recommended that the giving of bail in the Children's Court be discontinued, and that all minor prisoners charged with misdemeanors be paroled in the custody of their parents to await trial.

HILLTOP BATSMEN SMOTHER TIGERS

Champions Are Helpless Before the Splendid Pitching of "Joe" Doyle.

YANKEES PILE UP 11 RUNS

Detroit Amasses Two Tallies Toward End of Contest, When Home Folks Have Game Tucked Away.

Feast or famine—such seems to be the history of the Hilltop. Either the Yankees bank up enough runs to snow under topnotchers or they are unable to get anything worth mentioning off a tail-ender twirler. Yesterday was a feast day. Stallings's tribe smothered "the class of the league" by a score of 11 to 2, basting two pitchers until the victims were fairly fried in their own fat. Doyle, in the box for the locals, made jumpingjacks of the Tigers, and took all the rasp out of Hughey Jennings's yawp. He pitched superbly, allowing four hits in eight rounds, and permitting the visitors to bunch two safeties in the ninth only because his arm was weary of mowing them down. The Toppers waited so patiently, hit so heavily, and ran the bases so spryly that they needed only an average of a run to a hit to amass their crushing total. It was an auspicious opening for the three-game series for which Detroit came to Washington Heights. If the other members of the Jennings Ball and Strike Corps prove as easy as were Willets and Works the Yankees will take the whole string.

Rooters inclined to superstition laid great stress on information flashed from Detroit that the Tigers' pennant pole was smashed by a thunderbolt the evening before. The brief message told of a spread of dread through the Michigan city, where the incident was accepted as a bad omen. Nine thousand New Yorkers rejoiced when the lightning caromed all the way from that far-away flagstaff to the Hilltop and blasted the champions' chances in the first of the series. It was suggested mockingly that if the Tigers hoped to stay in the lead they would do well to wear asbestos uniforms—unless they could switch some of the electricity into their bats.

Doyle, like Arallanes for Boston on Wednesday, was excellent in that he let the batters connect with the ball, but worked a deadly down slant so persistently that most of them went out on fair or foul flies. Exactly two-thirds of the outs credited to local players were lofts or pops. Demmitt took four long soarers in centre and Engle dragged down no fewer than nine. It was Engle day, indeed, for Claudius, with a long homer to right centre in the opening chapter, garnered his side's first two tallies and he came in with two more runs in later rounds. The gentle Hackenschmidt batted .667. In three times at bat he made a homer and a single and counted thrice. He faced the Detroit delivery department on two other occasions, going to first on balls and completing the circuit in the third inning and bringing Keeler in with a fine sacrifice fly in the fourth. He also got a good mark for a stolen base. And in the field he was a human hatrack, extending himself at will to cover every part of the garden.

It wasn't altogether Engle day, come to think of it. It was Demmitt day and Keeler day and Chase day and Elberfeld day, too, to say nothing of Doyle day. Demmitt's wonderful running catch of Crawford's long line fly to right centre in the first inning not only despoiled Sam of what would have been a sure homer, but was one of the best bits of work ever seen on the diamond. Crawford, with two down, bent all his strength against a ball Doyle shot along the groove and in an instant the sphere was sailing toward the far corner of the fence. Demmitt was in precise midcentre when the ball started. He sprang toward right field at the crack of the bat and ran at such lightning speed that, fast though the leather traveled, he was on the spot when it began to hunt grass for a Bleriot landing. Even then it seemed impossible the fielder could make the catch. But he did, with a powerful plunge that sent him sprawling in a circus stunt ending with a perfect somersault. Probably most of the spectators thought he had dropped the prize in that tempestuous tumble, but when he stopped rolling his right hand flashed skyward with the ball in a bulldog grip. A beautiful catch beautifully held.

Willett lasted only three rounds. The Yankees got to him in the third for a hodge-podge of hits and battery errors that carried their total to 5. In the fourth, Works pitching, they netted 4 more counts from a similar mix-up. Demmitt made his fourth run in the fifth inning on his own bunt, over which Works and Beckendorf boneheaded, and Keeler's three-bagger that cost Willie's life at the plate in an effort to win a pair of shoes. New York's eleventh tally came in the sixth chapter on more boneheading by Beckendorf.

Outside Cobb's homer to the green gate in the seventh, Detroit's scoring was due to Sweeney's sleepy mishandling of Laporte's relay from Demmitt on Crawford's triple to right centre, Sam getting in on the backstop's error.

Manager Stallings yesterday bought for the Toppers Pitcher Fischer and Infielder Wanner of the Hartford team in the Connecticut League. The score:

DONLIN DEAL SETTLED?

Report Says Exchange of Players Will Be Completed Soon.

More Donlin rumors were current yesterday, and it is now said that the deal will be consummated in the near future, despite the opposition of Manager Murray of the Philadelphia team, who has proved the stumbling block up to the present time. According to Manager McGraw, who was in New York yesterday en route for Pittsburg, where the Giants open to-day, the deal for the exchange of Donlin for outfielder Sherwood Magee and a pitcher has been completed and will be finally ratified as soon as the stockholders of the Philadelphia Club hold a meeting and settle the managerial muddle.

It is stated that the plans would have been completed early in the week but for the death of Mrs. Wolf, the wife of Senator Wolf of Philadelphia, one of the principal stockholders of the Philadelphia Club. The funeral prevented a meeting of the Directors, who were to have conferred with McGraw in New York.

The Murray trouble may yet be aired in court unless the Quaker manager can arrange with the club owners to settle by means of a compromise. It is denied, however, that Manager Murray holds any stock. He is said to act as the representative of Bob Davis of Jersey City, and is on the Board of Directors by virtue of this fact. It is understood that there is a disposition on the part of the stockholders of the Philadelphia Club to treat Manager Murray fair, but Donlin will take up the reins of management as soon as the trade is ratified.

Pirates Purchase Two Pitchers.

GUTHRIE, Oklahoma, July 29.—Announcement was made yesterday of the sale of Floyd Willis and Clyde Geist, the two star pitchers of the Guthrie team of the Western Association, to the Chicago Nationals. Willis, who is a cousin of Vic Willis of Pittsburg, has won sixteen out of nineteen games pitched this season. Geist is one of the hardest hitters in the league in addition to being a winning pitcher.

Survivors in Western Golf.

FLOSSMOOR, Ill., July 29.—Kenneth P. Edwards, Midlothian; Albert Seckel, Riverside; Charles Evans, Jr., Exmoor, and Paul Hunter, Midlothian, won their matches in the third round of the Western amateur golf championship tournament at the Homewood Country Club to-day, and will meet in the semi-finals to-morrow. The series of form reversals and surprises which marked the first two rounds of match play continued to-day.

Manhattans vs. Colored Giants.

Andy Coakley's unbeaten Manhattans will clash with the New York Colored Giants for the second time this season at Manhattan Field, 282d Street and Broadway, next Sunday. Coakley, former member of the Chicago World's Champions, will, of course, pitch for the Manhattans. His receiver will be Pete Lamar, once of Cincinnati.

Grand Circuit Winners at Detroit.

DETROIT, July 29.—James E. Benyon, the eighteen-year-old son of Ed Benyon, made his debut as a grand circuit driver this afternoon, when he piloted Fair Margaret home first in three heats. The winners in to-day's races were Walter W. in the 2:15 pace, Fair Margaret in the 2:17 trot, and Bob Douglass in the 2:12 trot.

PRINCE AHMED WON IN A RECORD RACE

Pace to Half in 0:46 Stopped Rose Queen, and Victor Ran Six Furlongs in 1:11.

BESOM TOOK ARROW STAKES

Campaigner, 30 to 1, and Killiecrankie, 60 to 1, First and Second for a Purse at Yonkers.

In a sensational race at the Empire City Jockey Club's Yonkers track yesterday the Western horse Prince Ahmed, coming from a seemingly impossible position behind his field, equaled the world's record for six furlongs, and won easily, the time, 1:11, marking a better performance for Prince Ahmed on the mile course of Yonkers than the race of Chapultepec, on the faster mile and a furlong track, with its easier turn, at Los Angeles.

The race, though for a purse handicap, was the real feature of the Yonkers programme, as it brought together the fast Western filly Rose Queen and Prince Ahmed, at a distance more to the liking of the filly than the mile in which Prince Ahmed beat her on Monday, two other horses running. Though Rose Queen, with the top weight, was making concession of from sixteen pounds to Prince Ahmed up to thirty-six pounds to Bat Masterson, she started as an odds-on favorite.

Rose Queen helped Prince Ahmed as far as a fast pace could help him, in his victory, for, ridden by Powers, she left the post like a flash and went on in front at a killing pace, and though she ran herself off her feet, lasted in front for five furlongs. Her early effort destroyed her chance, but not until the horses were in the stretch did Prince Ahmed ever look like a contender. Rose Queen went down the backstretch to the furlong in 0:11 2-5, the quarter in 0:22 4-5, three furlongs in 0:34 1-5, with her field strung out for about seventy-five yards, Prince Ahmed last and looking hopelessly out of the race until, just before the far turn was reached, he began to close slowly.

Rose Queen went on to the half mile in 0:46, Prince Ahmed then perceptibly closing ground on the leaders, but Rose Queen still looked to have the race won when she swung into the stretch. Prince Ahmed settled down then and was running up fast on the leaders when Rose Queen began to tire and stop at the last furlong, Colloquy then closing and challenging the pacemaker. Colloquy had only showed beside Rose Queen when Prince Ahmed, coming on with an overwhelming rush, raced past both mares, and, drawing away at the end, won easily by two lengths, Colloquy beating Rose Queen three lengths for the place. Prince Ahmed carried the colors of H. G. Bedwell, the Western turfman whose triumphs have been the feature of the Yonkers meeting, the race being the fourteenth won by the Bedwell horses, or one for each day of the meeting.

GLIDDEN TOUR'S LAST DAY.

Ten Perfect Score Cars Come Through Kansas Without a Break.

Special to The New York Times.

SALINA, Kan., July 29.—Every one of the ten perfect scores of last night remains this evening; everybody, in short, is postponing the fatal day in the consuming desire to go into Kansas City with a perfect score no matter what the technical examination of Saturday may reveal. It is admitted this evening by members of the board that one well-known car in the Glidden Trophy division must have one important part entirely rebuilt. Jockeying is going on at a lively rate, rival drivers having collected much evidence of minor irregularities against each other. The roads to-morrow include many hills, with sand and gumbo, but that would not be enough to deter lively running so as to end first. Accordingly, Chairman Hower has given notice that he will hold back, outside Kansas City, the first fifteen cars.

All the cars got in here fairly well except the Glide, which can hardly arrive before morning, and is therefore likely to withdraw. Several penalties are still in suspension, notably that of Premier 53 (Detroit Trophy class) in order to determine the price of outside material used on a broken spring. Those announced to-night were White 14, kerosene, (Glidden class 04) mud guard repairs; Mason 112 (Hower class) 352.2, of which 296 was tardiness and 56 labor; Glide 10 (Glidden class) yesterday's deferred 247 points, of which 215 was tardiness and 25.7 labor; Jewell 111 (Hower class) 2.6, repairs, gasoline feed pipe; Jewell 7 (incurred July 24, but suspended,) 2.3, repairs fan belt.

Swimming at Coney Island.

After winning the 100-yard swim at the races of the Brighton Athletic Club last night in the tank at Steeplechase Park, H. Hamilton of the Bedford Young Men's Christian Association was practically disqualified, and the prizes in the event held, because he had violated two rules of the Amateur Athletic Union in filing his entry blank. Hamilton has only been a contestant in this city for two weeks, formerly having been a member of a club in Pittsburg. The main point of contention was that he had not been in this district as an unattached contestant for a period of three months, as the rules require.

There were a number of the New York Athletic Club swimmers entered in the events, but for the most part they failed to put in an appearance. The only winner from this club was W. W. Swan, who came in first in the tub race with his team mate, B. King, in second position. The summary:

75-Yard Swim, Novice.—Won by P. Webb, Bath Beach Swimming Association; R. Clark, Twenty-third Street Y. M. C. A., second; C. Sandel, unattached, third. Time—0:46 4-5.

100-Yard Swim, Handicap.—Won by H. Hamilton, Bedford Y. M. C. A., (20 seconds;) J. J. Curren, New York Swimming Association, (26 seconds,) second; F. D. Bannon, New York Swimming Association, (15 seconds,) third. Time—1:12 4-5.

Tub Race.—Won by W. W. Swan, New York A. C.; B. King, New York A. C., second; W. Coppinger, Bath Beach Swimming Association, third. Time—1:41 1-5.

New York Athletes Win in Providence.

Special to The New York Times.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., July 29.—The colors of the Irish-American Athletic Club at the hands of Martin Sheridan were well to the fore at the games in connection with the celebration of Irish Day by the Clan-na-Gaels of Rhode Island at the Rocky Point Baseball Grounds this afternoon. The event called together the largest field of athletes ever seen in this State, including, in addition to Sheridan, John J. Flanagan, Martin McGrath, and T. J. Collins. Flanagan beat the world's record at throwing the 56-pound weight, hurling it 40 feet 10 inches, but the throw was not made in conformity with the rule which requires the thrower to stand within an iron circle, hence it will not stand as a record. Sheridan captured three firsts and a third, winning the hop, step, and jump, the 16-pound shotput with 42 feet 5½ inches, and the discus throw with 135 feet. Flanagan also won the 16-pound hammer throw with 175 feet 1 inch. Collins was third in the three-mile run.

CARS IN READINESS FOR 24-HOUR RACE

Simplex, Winner Last Year, Is Favorite Again—Lozier Second Choice.

INTEREST IN OTHER RACES

Brighton Marathon of 100 Miles Has Fast Field Entered, as Has Also the Free-for-All.

Entrants in the twenty-four hour race which starts to-night at the new Brighton Beach Motordome drew for numbers and positions yesterday at the headquarters of the Motor Racing Association. As a result of the drawing the racers will be lined up as follows when the signal is given for them to get away at 8:45 o'clock: No. 1, Acme; No. 2, Lozier; No. 3, Simplex; No. 4, Chalmers-Detroit; No. 5, Stearns; No. 6, Palmer-Singer; No. 7, Rainier; No. 8, Fiat, and No. 9, Haynes. The Acme No. 1 will have the post position, and the others will take their places in rotation across the track.

There are to be a number of important races and speed events before the great round the clock contest. The first race will start at 1:30 o'clock, and there will be no cessation of racing until the end of the twenty-four-hour event Saturday night. The Brighton Marathon of 100 miles is the most important of the preliminary events. There will also be a 50-mile race for small cars and a free-for-all at a shorter distance.

Many of the racing cars were on Broadway yesterday, and they attracted general attention as they sped along with a continuous crackle as of musketry coming from their exhausts. It is said that more wagers have been made upon the result of the twenty-four-hour race this year than on any previous race of the kind. The Simplex is favorite in the betting because of the splendid showing it made last year. George Robertson will again drive the Simplex, but Frank Lescault, who was his alternate last year, will not be his patrner this time, Al Poole having been selected. The Simplex holds the twenty-four-hour record of 1,177 miles. A close second in the betting is the Lozier car, to be driven by Mulford and Cobe, both of whom are well known to twenty-four-hour race goers. The Fiat, Stearns, and Acme have many backers, while the other cars are regarded as possible dark horses.

For the Brighton Marathon, which will be started at 5:30 o'clock, the Chalmers-Detroit, Acme, and S. P. O. cars are considered favorites. The Kissel Kar and Midland have outside chances. Wally Owen, who has been out of the racing game for some time, may be at the wheel of the Kissel Kar. Owen is a most consistent driver, and it will be of great assistance to any car he drives to have him at the wheel.

The contest for honors in the free-for-all event will probably be one of the most exciting numbers on the programme. The Fiat Cyclone, with Ralph De Palma at the wheel, will be pitted against a Mercedes, a Buick, an Allen-Kingston, and several other fast cars.

There will be free parking space for 500 automobiles back of the clubhouse and grand stand, and a limited number of parking spaces alongside the track at a small fee.

The tented village to be occupied by the crews of competing cars in the twenty-four-hour race has been completed in the infield, and with the hospital and official tents presents an attractive appearance.

Marshall Leads in Chess Tourney.

Frank J. Marshall by beating Herbert Rosenfeld in the fourth round of the masters' tournament, played under the auspices of the New York State Chess Association at the Fort Lowry Hotel, Bath Beach, yesterday, took the lead with half a point over the latter, while McMartin remained in the lead in the general tourney.

New York Tennis Men Win.

NORFOLK, Conn., July 29.—In the final round of the doubles in the tennis tournament here to-day R. Leroy and C. J. Post, Jr., of New York beat H. Nickerson of Pittsfield, Mass., and W. Roberts of Hartford, 6–1, 6–3, 3–6, 4–6, 6–2. In the semi-final round of the singles H. Nickerson beat Edmund Peaslee of New York, 6–2, 6–3.

A SAVING OF $20.00 on 36" AUTOMOBILE TIRES

The enormous increase in the cost of crude Rubber has forced the manufacturers to advance the prices of Automobile Tires, and there is every indication of a further increase on September 1st.

If the saving of $20.00 to $25.00 on a casing is of interest, we suggest your taking advantage of these low prices for this special lot of Morgan & Wright Tires. The name is partly buffed off, and there may be a mold mark here or there, but for actual use they are practically perfect. Clincher, Quick Detachable, and Dunlop style.

THE POLITICAL BUGABOO.

What is the President afraid of? He is making a stubborn fight under conditions that lend themselves to sensational headlines, but it is as to relatively small issues, the annis and cummin for which the weightier matters of the law are neglected. He is conspicuously solicitous about hides and a difference of 25 cents on lumber, and it is intimated that if he cannot have his way on these the bill will be defeated and another extraordinary session of Congress will be called for the Fall. We should say that it would hardly need a threat so portentous to induce Mr. ALDRICH to yield duties to which New England is not opposed, especially when he gets the outrageous favors accorded to New England in the cotton schedule. Indeed, it would be an explanation that explains should one say that Mr. ALDRICH was making a feint of fighting hard over these little matters in order to distract public attention from the signal advantages he has won for the cotton mills from the President, without a murmur on the part of the latter. As the contest stands it is theatrical and showy, but it amounts to very little. The standpatters can in the end yield everything the President is asking, and come out away ahead of the cunning game in which they have engaged him. The lowest rates enacted in either the House or the Senate bill would give them a substantial and very valuable victory. They would have turned a "revision downward" into a revision upward in everything they are really interested in. The President would raise the siege he has been conducting so bravely, claiming success, but leaving the fortress stronger than ever and its defenders safe, fat, and happy.

Cannot the President see that if he were making a real fight over something worth while, if he were standing out for a substantial revision downward and for the general reduction of duties to the difference in cost abroad and at home, with a profit to American industries, the people would be with him even more strongly and definitely than they are now? Doubtless Mr. ALDRICH is telling him that a split in the party would follow such a course. It is nonsense. Who would make the split? Not the standpatters, however they now may bluster. They are not going to bring in a Democratic majority because they cannot get all they want from a Republican one. Their talk is sheer bluff and it ought not to scare any one who can see what they really have in their hands and what their inevitable interests would make them do. The only danger from tariff revision to the Republican Party lies in failure to keep its promises, in letting the standpatters off unharmed, trying to fool the people with pretended reduction that will bring higher cost of living in its train. It is indeed quite possible that the next House may be Democratic if the tariff goes through in any form that now seems probable. The men and women of the land, when they come to read the action of the Republican Party in their weekly expense account, may well express their resentment in that form. But if the President should, even at this late hour, insist on a practical, definite, appreciable loosening of the bonds in which the protected interests hold the consumers, there would be no danger of a Democratic majority. There would be a heavy Republican majority in favor of real revision and reduction. That is the plain situation at the present moment, and it is a profound pity that Mr. TAFT cannot see it and act on it.

A LONGEVITY TRUST.

The term "life insurance" never meant the insuring of lives until this year, when Dr. BURNSIDE FOSTER and Prof. IRVING FISHER interested the life companies in their plans of preventing premature death. One company has this week announced its purpose to save one-third of the amount awarded for death claims of tuberculous policy holders by a campaign of cure and prevention. The agents of the companies might easily be transformed into a [illegible] body of health agents, armed with [illegible] and advice to each [illegible] of policies. A [illegible] physicians, specialists in the chief diseases, may treat patients in every community who cannot otherwise command skilled services. By such work the companies would have fewer death claims to pay. They could promise larger benefits. But this, which has hitherto been a deciding argument in insurance competition, is only incidental to the added promise that the policy holder's life, which is of quite inestimable value to his family, would be guarded.

The competition of the life companies, once started toward the prolongation of their patrons' lives, will not end until not only tuberculosis but all the diseases that figure largely in the actuarial tables become the subject of skilled attention. The lives of most men who can afford to employ a doctor are already "insured." Ultimately, we presume, those physicians not retained by the companies would be reduced to treating minor ills, or they would be forced quite out of their profession.

The organization of preventive medicine has reached startling proportions, but it has failed to keep pace with the progress in medical science. This progress is so rapid that the medical colleges complain that they cannot catch up in their equipment. But if the new departure in life insurance means anything, it means that the companies are beginning to resolve themselves into what they have an inherent right to be, companies of physicians—a Longevity Trust.

SENATOR STONE'S MISTAKE.

Whether Senator STONE of Missouri slapped the face of a dining car waiter in Delaware or in Maryland, (the testimony is conflicting on this point,) his conduct was unbecoming to a gentleman, and quite out of keeping with the dignity of a United States Senator. The Maryland Magistrate decided that the provocation justified the slapping. The Senator insisted on the use of the verb "to slap." "I did not strike a man," he explained, "I slapped a nigger." Everybody who travels much, and uses the dining cars, can sympathize with the Senator. The service is frequently bad. Mr. STONE was compelled to wait for his frugal luncheon of lamb chops and boiled eggs until all the other occupants of the car had been served, and the large glass of water he ordered with his whisky was not forthcoming. When a Missouri gentleman orders water with his whisky it should be served promptly. It would be folly to argue that Pullman car waiters have no sense of humor; they are full of it.

We do not believe that Senator STONE threatened, by look, gesture, or word, to shoot Mr. BROWN. But he ought not to have slapped him. The Maryland Magistrate's law is bad law. No provocation justifies loss of self-control in a United States Senator. No gentleman is ever justified in striking a man whom he regards as an inferior. Presumably his contempt for the negro been publicly subjected to indignity. Naturally he feels his importance. Doubtless his contempt for the negro is an inheritance, as he is a Kentuckian by birth and a Missourian by education and residence. But his argument that "slapping a nigger" is not "striking a man" will not hold good in many States of the Union.

Of course no sort of moralizing after the event will have much effect on the Senator. He escaped, without the exaction of a fine, from the clutches of the law, and without even admonition from the Judge, who had maintained that the assault was technically a breach of the peace, a charge on which even a Senator may be arrested and punished. Clearly Mr. STONE should have controlled his temper, and complained in writing of the ill-treatment he received to the Pullman Company. Even if the complaint thus made had been ignored by the company the Senator's wrath would have subsided, and he would not have placed himself in the eyes of a large majority of his fellow-citizens, who are trying their best to retain their respect for the United States Senate, in a humiliating and most ignoble position.

THE CORPORATION TAX ALREADY AT WORK.

The corporation income tax is yet to be reported, but in advance of its consideration or passage it is already having an effect upon corporation affairs. An official circular has been sent to railways in general sounding them in regard to changing their accounting year, which now agrees with that of the Treasury, to agree with the calendar year, which is made the accounting year for all corporations by Mr. WICKERSHAM'S innovation. And it is intimated that in case the railways do not think well of the change the Inter-State Commerce Commission may order the change anyway.

Admittedly it is incongruous that there shall be several years of account fixed by law, but that hardly seems to be a good reason for altering those already fixed to correspond with those which are merely contemplated. It seems to be thought that it is of no particular consequence which year shall be adopted, as though the years now in force were, like the new year, merely a hasty happy thought. If it were so, and if it were a mere contest between new and old happy thoughts, the old ought to prevail. Change merely for the sake of change is as foolish as opposition to every innovation merely because it is an innovation. But the custom regarding financial years rests on solid reason, not on happy chance. This mid-year date is the between-crop date. One crop has been got out of the way in the various processes of production and consumption, another crop has been cultivated clear up to the stage of being laid by for the harvest, and there is a pause which is extremely natural and convenient for making up accounts. To change to the middle of the Winter holiday would be to impose a fresh task upon merchants already busied by trade, and suffering some diversion by social preoccupations.

So far as has been stated there is no reason for making a change in the custom fixed by general experience, and confirmed by the adoption of the Inter-State Commerce Commission. Yet its statistician now puts out the circular inviting the railways to alter the practice established by the Commission in favor of the new plan under a law not yet even reported. This is one of the points made by the associated accountants, whose advice Mr. WICKERSHAM has already rejected. The point is not likely to be discussed in Congress, because it will come up as part of the conference report on the tariff, for the passage of which the pins are already set up before the report is made. The corporation income tax in itself rivals the importance of the tariff, and as the entering wedge of a general income tax it threatens a greater revolution in our tax system than the tariff revision itself. Yet it is likely to be adopted without debate, even without opposition, because opposition has been hobbled by the method of procedure, and despite sound criticism which was not even accorded the bare privilege of a hearing. Yet who favors it? And what is the need of proceeding in such haste?

J. J. SHANNON, R. A.

The elevation of Mr. J. J. SHANNON to the full rank of Academician in Great Britain's historic art institution, the Royal Academy, is an incident of some international importance. There are now three American Royal Academicians among the forty, JOHN S. SARGENT having been admitted in 1897 and EDWIN A. ABBEY in 1898. Mr. SHANNON became an Associate of the Royal Academy the year Mr. SARGENT received the right to place the initials R. A. after his signature. Unlike his two compatriots in the Royal Academy, Mr. SHANNON is not a member of our National Academy of Design. He went to England, to study in the South Kensington Schools, in his fourteenth year, and has since remained in London, first exhibiting at Burlington House in 1881. There is nothing historically incongruous in American membership of the Royal Academy, of course, as BENJAMIN WEST, the first American painter of renown, was one of its original members, and followed Sir JOSHUA REYNOLDS in the Presidency.

Mr. SHANNON'S new honors have no particular relation to his nationality. Like SARGENT, in his most productive period, and ABBEY, since he went abroad to seek, on English soil, character and atmosphere for his illustrations of English literary classics, SHANNON has been a London painter. But Americans eagerly seek admission to his charming studio in Holland Park, and doubtless many of his sitters are Americans.

In a certain sense his fame is beneficial to American art. He has been largely a painter of portraits, and as such he is not a "painter's painter," to use Mr. CAFFIN'S phrase, in the sense that SARGENT, in his best work, and ALEXANDER, too, in a smaller degree, appeal first of all to the men who best comprehend the technique and spirit of art. But SHANNON ranks well among contemporary portrait painters. If he does not often get at the inmost secrets of a sitter's character, (and few profitable sitters care to be painted that way,) if his pictures are noted less for suggestion than for cleverness and delicate finish, they are popular and generally highly prized by their subjects.

SPAIN DEMORALIZED.

At first glance the dispatches from Spain seem to show that a widespread and formidable campaign has been begun there against the use of the National army in National defense. In other words, the most striking antimilitarist demonstration that history has so far produced seems to be in the course of sudden and surprising development. The nearness of the seat of conflict to the peninsula strikingly intensifies the horrors of war in the minds of Spaniards. In less than a week after the embarkation of enthusiastically cheered soldiers for Morocco the deaths of many of them were reported. Demonstrations against the authority which had sent the soldiers to their death followed quickly. This authority was accused of having embarked upon an unnecessary war, of having sacrificed the lives of Spaniards to protect private mining industries in Morocco. The Government has responded to these rebellious manifestations by placing the whole peninsula under martial law.

All this is on the surface. The demonstration against militarism was little more than sentimental and individual until it found expression in Barcelona and among the Catalans. History shows that Barcelona is always quick to develop any signs of revolt against recognized government. Catalonia, as the most wealthy province in Spain, has always been burdened with a major part of the National expenses. Moreover, its local enterprises, consisting of vast mining and commercial interests, have received little encouragement from the National Government. It has consistently objected to paying the expenses of war and has periodically demanded fiscal autonomy such as is enjoyed by the Biscay provinces. To bring about this object a combination of employers and employés was formed a few years ago, with branches in other parts of Spain, where industrial enterprise seemed to invite such alliances. This combination is called the National Union, and has already dealt with certain advanced problems of capital and labor. Eleven years ago it strenuously opposed the Spanish-American war and advised Catalans not to pay their taxes until Spain ceased hostilities. It has repeated this advice whenever extraordinary budgets have been announced by the National Government. Here, therefore, is a situation which is innately opposed to the wasteful and ruinous character of warfare.

Barcelona is not only the wealthiest and most enterprising of all Spanish ports; it is also the Mecca of the Anarchist and Socialist exiles from European capitals. Here the enemies of Government and society congregate free from all restraint; here they write their seditious literature and formulate their violent propagandas. This is why riot reigns in Barcelona whenever there is a demonstration in any part of Spain, whether the cause be political, anti-clerical, or industrial, or the merely academic pronunciamentos of the National Union. Hardly a procession of peaceful demonstrators can pass through the streets without arousing these criminal aliens to action. Two years ago, helpless to deal with the situation, the municipality of Barcelona, acting in conjunction with the Ministry of Interior, invited Inspector ARROW of Scotland Yard to go and reorganize the local police. He did the work required, and then presented a list of foreign undesirables whom he recommended should be expelled from the country. The Ministry of the Interior is still considering his advice.

Such are the conditions at the chief storm centre. Elsewhere in the peninsula is to be found that poverty, idleness, and overtaxation which is so quick to search for relief in any public excitement, so ready to become violent without examining direct causes. Although the sacrifice of Spanish youths who had not the exemption provided by family ties or the money to pay for substitutes may have ignited the torch, the flames of which are now spreading, the torch itself is composed of elements which go to the very roots of Spanish life and society. It is mournful to contemplate the pathetic figure of the young monarch, who is striving to put down with an iron hand a rebellion the fundamental causes of which he has ever consistently and ardently labored to remove. The defeat of Spanish arms at Melilla adds to the gravity of the situation.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Release of the Criminal Insane. The last annual report by Medical Supt. LAMB of the Matteawan State Hospital contains this item of statistics:

> Habeas corpus cases have been more than ordinarily frequent. It has been my privilege to collect and classify the history of some forty-three cases. * * *
>
> It is interesting to know that the "incurable paranoiac," so adjudged by two specialists of New York City, to the minds of a later jury recovered sufficiently to gain his release, and when last heard from was again in a way to secure a fresh commitment.
>
> In thirty-four cases the court ordered the relator discharged from the hospital. Our table shows that of these thirty-four declared sane by the courts fourteen found their way back to either prison or asylum. Eight after their release showed signs of mental disturbance and were troublesome to their families. Three, unable to earn their own livelihood, were cared for by their relatives. Six disappeared from view. Two committed suicide and a single one, when last heard of, was partially self-sustaining. Of the forty-three cases twenty-seven had committed criminal acts directly against persons and sixteen against property. Of the twenty-seven committing crime against persons twelve were charged with the crime of murder in the first degree, the diagnosis in a majority of instances indicating a chronic and irrecoverable insanity.

This is an appalling record. Probably the Judges and juries concerned in these discharges were influenced by the complete mental lucidity manifested by the appellants during the progress of the trials. Every alienist knows that a lunatic is often apt to betray his lunacy only under the continued stresses and strains incidental to his contact with the world, and that, removed from the friction of affairs and committed to the care of skilled attendants, his condition, even if incurable, may be so far alleviated as to make him appear normal during intervals of his confinement. Once freed, his disease becomes again acute, dangerous symptoms reappear, and society is once more exposed to the impulses and acts of a maniac.

Nevertheless, Supt. LAMB expresses himself as not opposed to habeas corpus proceedings as such—"it is to the manner of hearing the cases that objection is made." And he indicates the proper method:

> It would be perfectly within the law for a Judge to appoint a medical commission to sit in each case, but this is not mandatory.

Such a commission would apply tests which only competent and disinterested alienists can use in determining the cases of persons committed to Matteawan whose minds seem to have regained their normal balance.

The Dilemma in the Sutton Case. Were it not that the officials investigating the death of Lieut. SUTTON have shown some disposition to shield the persons implicated, the petition of the Sutton counsel that the inquiry be not turned into a prosecution until after the arrival in this country of Lieut. UTLEY, whose value as a witness is undoubted, would need scant consideration. UTLEY, according to Private KENNEDY'S testimony, stopped the fist fight between SUTTON and ADAMS and carried SUTTON'S clothes. He witnessed the shooting and told KENNEDY that Lieut. SUTTON "had shot [illegible]," instructing him the next [illegible] picked up the Colt service revolver on the scene of the fatality after company formation at 8 o'clock. There is enough in this testimony to warrant the prosecution of UTLEY and his companions, and the court has so ordered. Yet Lawyer DAVIS objects:

> If the Navy Department allows my protest and UTLEY goes on the stand as a witness he must not be allowed to communicate with any of the officers who have testified. Under the direct order of the court they are prohibited from discussing the case with any one. Furthermore, he cannot have access to any testimony in either the first or the second inquiry.
>
> But if he is declared a defendant then he can examine all the testimony and can confer with his fellow-defendants about the stories they have told on the stand and can otherwise prepare himself to meet the attack and protect himself. This would nullify absolutely the usefulness of one of the most valuable witnesses in the case.

Mr. DAVIS would eat his cake and have it, too. He would conduct a prosecution under the guise of an inquiry, with the hope of securing from the alleged principals incriminating testimony. "On the record as it stands," the mother of SUTTON wrote on Feb. 8, it should be presumed that a homicide had been committed. That presumption is now sufficiently strengthened, and the accused men are entitled to the rights and immunities of defendants.

Prohibition of Liquor Drinking. Prohibition of liquor selling has been upheld as legal by the Federal Supreme Court. The report that the new prohibitory laws in Kansas interdict not only the sale but the drinking of liquor on trains will, if true, doubtless occasion a fresh ruling from that tribunal upon an exercise of the police power never hitherto put in practice. It might be argued that the reasons given by the court in justifying a law to prohibit the manufacture or sale of liquor, with the intent to deprive the community absolutely of beverages deemed hurtful to its health and morals, would be valid in prohibiting the drinking of such beverages. Assuredly the rights and immunities guaranteed to each citizen by the Fourteenth Amendment do not extend to the commission of acts which the moral sense of his fellows, or of a majority of them, condemns.

But the moral sense of most men, even of Kansans, does not condemn liquor drinking, or it would be powerful enough to make the law applicable generally throughout the State, and not merely upon express trains. This must be a legislative freak, unsupported by the sentiment of the people. The Kansans enforce only half-heartedly their prohibition of the traffic in liquor. It will be long before they evince a sincere desire to abolish directly its consumption.

ABLE-BODIED IMMIGRANTS.

Says Their Possession of $25 Cash Is Not Required.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Had "B. L." taken the trouble to have accurately interpreted the letter on which he bases his argument that Commissioner Williams has "enormously exceeded his authority," he would not have been so free to characterize my statements as "erroneous and misleading." As the matter now stands, he has convicted himself of the word garbling and beating around the bush which I stated as characteristic of the old administration of Ellis Island affairs. In the first place, no such official letter of instructions as he mentioned was ever issued to the Immigrant Inspectors or members of the Board of Special Inquiry. On June 26 the Commissioner sent a "notice concerning indigent immigrants" to the steamship companies. This is probably what your correspondent refers to. In that letter the following sentences occurred:

> Certain steamship companies are bringing to this port many immigrants whose funds are manifestly inadequate for their proper support until such time as they are likely to obtain profitable employment. Such action is improper, and must cease. In the absence of statutory provision, no hard and fast rule can be laid down as to the amount of money an immigrant must bring with him, but in the majority of cases it will be unsafe for immigrants to arrive with less than $25, besides railroad ticket to destination, while in many instances they should have more.

How this advisory letter addressed to the steamship companies can be construed into a general order to the Inspectors and members of the Boards of Special Inquiry to "detain and exclude" all able-bodied immigrants unless they have $25 is beyond the comprehension of a logical mind. Immigration officials did not so consider it. The records show that on the day of its issue, and every day since then, many immigrants have been freely admitted without the $25, which your correspondent professes to believe an essential to their landing.

The reason that the public seems to think that the immigrant is being discriminated against probably lies in the fact that formerly there were so many reversals of the findings of the Boards of Inquiry, and so much discrimination in favor of those specified as undesirable under the law, that it is now difficult to realize that the difference is really caused by a just administration, in contradistinction to one of favoritism.

The Fall of Taft.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your leader in yesterday's issue, "Mr. Taft's Retreat," could reasonably have borne a title much more severe and yet have left you well within the bounds of propriety.

During his campaign and until the tariff revision reached a crucial stage, Mr. Taft was looked upon by both Republicans and Democrats as a strong man, and there was general belief that he would make good his pre-election promises, but if the dispatch from Washington which you published on the 26th inst. be correct, there are few sane men in this country, except those blind to every other interest save their own, who will not have changed their opinions of him. His attempt to show the people who elected him that prohibition of higher prices and revision downward are identical, is indeed pitiable and would discredit even the professional politician.

Sparrows' Bad Habits.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Talking about exterminating sparrows! Why? For their nuisance? Why not talk about exterminating mankind? Sparrows are useful, cunning little creatures. As to their bad habit of chattering from dawn to sunset, their squabbling all day long, as to their being always hungry and not being wiser than they are, as to their feeding and pilfering wherever there is an opportunity to do so, I beg to say that such regrettable habits do not speak well for our human society, since the sparrow closely associates with us.

The sparrows have undoubtedly acquired their bad manners from their surroundings. The animals that do not associate with human beings know invariably better how to behave.

A "Kick's" Surprising Result.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

What's this world coming to when a plain, ordinary, every day commuter can register a kick and actually have it acted upon? About two weeks ago I complained about the lack of signs at the Flatbush Avenue Subway station of the Long Island Railroad. Yesterday beautiful signboards, exactly carrying out my suggestion, were placed at each entrance.

RUCKER ON PORTO RICO.

Resident Declares Congressman Has Ignored All the Pleasant Features.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Ever since the American occupation, Porto Rico has had its casual tourists and an occasional newspaper and magazine writer, who return to the States and air their views about this country. Accustomed as the Porto Ricans are to see many things misrepresented in these communications to the public press, still the recent speech of Congressman Rucker in Congress has capped the climax.

In the first place Mr. Rucker of Colorado and Mr. Scott of Kansas spent exactly four days and ten hours on the island, and they came here ostensibly to investigate the agricultural conditions in Porto Rico, but it appears that in the short space of time, a little more than four days, they have gone through the whole gamut, and are prepared to settle the destiny of a country.

In his speech Mr. Rucker starts with the discovery of the island, and afterward its occupation by Ponce de Leon and the treatment of the original inhabitants by the Spaniards, and he then goes into the subject of the mixture of races brought about by importing slaves, &c., and seems to hold the present population responsible for the sins of their ancestors. We will admit the mixture of the races, and it is a condition that exists all over the West Indies, but how about the way the people who first occupied the Continent of North America treated the Indians? Is this to be cast up to them forever? Also, how about some of the conditions existing in the Southern States between masters and slaves, and haven't we quite a little mixture in the States to-day?

However, if Mr. Rucker had stuck strictly to facts, he might have found enough to criticise, but why should he so grossly misrepresent so many things? The children on this island never run around naked, beyond five or six years of age, and we presume that Mr. Rucker must have seen a number of boys enjoying themselves in bathing when he stated that the children ran around here naked until they were twelve years of age. I have been on the island several years and in many towns and through the country districts, and I have yet to see a child over six years of age without clothes, except an occasional case where the boys were running down to the river, and I have seen more boys about that age naked around the outskirts of Washington, D. C. As to his questionable joke about the Senoritas' stockings. No doubt there are many poor women in the country who are compelled to go without them, on account of not having the money to buy them, but Mr. Rucker seems to have overlooked the thousands of beautiful and refined women who are residents of Porto Rico. Why is it that so many newspaper and magazine people, or rather some of the correspondents who write to them, always write about the poor people, and neglect to mention any of the delightful sides of life in Porto Rico?

If Mr. Rucker will refer to the statistics of imports, he will be surprised to find that quite a quantity of shoes and stockings are brought to the island. Also, he may be assured of a very pleasant reception if he chooses to visit this island again.

THEORY OF HYPNOTISM.

Part of the Science of the Salesman, Physician, and Preacher.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

My theory of hypnotism is that through a suggestion which becomes the dominant idea the reasoning faculty is held in abeyance or certain ideas are turned into an unnatural channel. When certain ideas are already following an unnatural trend therapeutic hypnotism endeavors to turn them into the proper course. In rare cases auto-suggestion can produce the hypnotic state; generally it requires a hypnotist to make the suggestion. By hypnotist I mean any one who, by his personality, can influence another to do something which reason would oppose. The salesman who can induce the merchant to make unnecessary purchases, the ventriloquist who can make people forget that he is doing the talking and make them imagine that it is the mannikin; the revivalist who is able to bring about a state of religious exaltation which neglects the physical body, are all hypnotists working along special lines. The physician who commands the absolute faith of his patient can hypnotize that patient, not by his eye, but by his personality, his personal influence in that particular case.

In every case of hypnotism there is an element of faith or fear with unstable reasoning faculties. While in that state the individual is virtually in a condition of temporary insanity, and therein lies the wrong in public exhibitions and the great danger in all cases where an individual is frequently hypnotized. Not alone does the mind become weakened through being frequently led into unnatural channels, but there is the possibility that a subject in the hypnotic state may not respond to the adverse suggestion necessary to restore him to his normal condition.

No Vicarious Atonement Needed.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Dr. Eliot in his "new" religion has risen to the occasion, and the enunciation of his doctrine comes in due season. He has struck a happy medium between the instability of the old theology and the "moonshine" of many of the new cults. The utilitarian consideration of morality is indeed sound doctrine. Jesus embodied the idea in His injunction to the man He had healed: "Go and sin no more, lest a worse thing come unto thee." Virtue for the sake of future reward is no virtue, and the idea is in its very essence degrading.

A universal recognition of the truth that whatsoever a man soweth that shall he reap would effectually preclude the consolation of vicarious atonement.

Promotion of Engineer Cadets.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

May I in this letter ask why it is that the engineer cadets of the American Line ships running out of this port cannot get any promotion? The cadets have to be American-born boys, over 16 and under 21. On this line I have not known any to get so much as any oiler's rate. The engineers of this line are mostly foreign born, holding American citizenship papers. For example, the ship now in port on which I served is made up of Scotch and English engineers. One electrician is American born. On the Ward, or Red D, Line a cadet may be promoted after serving a year's time to oiler.

Does the American boy have no chance on ships flying the American flag?

TO A GRASSHOPPER.

Thou art cadaverous in the extreme,
And hungry looking, viewed from fore to aft,
Yet in thy boiler thou hast wondrous steam
To so propel thy slim, long-legged craft.

Thy leaps are marvels! Aimed due North or East,
Thou landest Westward where one thinkest not.
Dost thou then eat self-raising flour or yeast
That thou canst reach at once so far a spot?

I watch thee daily skipping through the grass,
Perched on a fence or hopping toward the moon,
Yet thou returnest to the ground, alas!
To squash thy person on my gown full soon.

And as I marvel thy far-reaching gait
I feel some pity through my senses steal,
To see a hen, with one gulp, end thy fate,
And then to think how that poor hen must feel!

HOTCHKISS CLOSES INSURANCE FIRMS

State Superintendent Proceeds Against Small Concerns Which Have Fallen Behind.

GETS ORDERS AGAINST TEN

Companies to Which He Has Turned His Attention Include Accident and Fire Concerns.

A crusade has been begun by State Supt. of Insurance Hotchkiss against insurance organizations which have been operating at a loss without apparent prospects of squaring up their indebtedness. Within the last two months the State Superintendent has obtained court orders against ten companies and assessment societies which were reported to him as being insolvent. Eight of them are now in process of liquidation by deputies appointed by the Superintendent, and in the case of the others Mr. Hotchkiss is now making an investigation to determine whether or not to put them out of business.

The State Superintendent's activities are being directed against all classes of insurance companies, including those handling fire and accident risks. Seven fire insurance companies, one accident, one assessment benefit society, and one fraternal order have fallen into his dragnet thus far, and Mr. Hotchkiss said yesterday that he had his eyes on more of them.

The latest move by Mr. Hotchkiss in his crusade was taken yesterday when he obtained an order in the Supreme Court against the National Fraternal Society, with headquarters at 736 Lexington Avenue. It was organized in March, 1900, and has 223 members, with J. Stewart Wilson as President.

Mr. Hotchkiss learned that, on July 1, it had incurred liabilities of $21,281, all unpaid death claims. The society then had $230,000 of outstanding insurance. It had $258 in the treasury. Mr. Hotchkiss, on receiving the report of his examiner, considered it wise to take charge of the society, and the court order granted yesterday turned it over to him. Mr. Hotchkiss will decide, after a further examination, whether or not the society ought to be liquidated.

The State Superintendent this week also obtained an order against the Western New York Relief Association, an assessment organization run much on the principle of the National Fraternal Society. It has two lodges in Brooklyn, with headquarters at 4 Court Square, Brooklyn. Its President is Elsworth Bennett and its Vice President W. F. Bennett. The society was organized in 1884. The Insurance Examiner ascertained that it owes in death claims $1,884, which the families of the deceased members have been unable to collect. Its total liabilities are slightly over $2,000, and there is a balance in the association's treasury of $43.14.

Recently the State Superintendent obtained an order against the Traders and Travelers' Accident Company of 99 Nassau Street, which was found to have a deficit of $1,400. This company issued policies on an assessment basis, and had fallen in arrears in payment of claims. The State Superintendent has obtained permission to liquidate this company.

The seven fire insurance companies against which the State Superintendent has proceeded are the following, all operating with the same officers, with headquarters in Syracuse: The American Mutual, Aetna Mutual, Capital Mutual, Mohawk Mutual, Phoenix Mutual, Reliable Mutual, and Union Mutual. The companies have done business in different parts of Onondaga County, each with its particular territory. They have operated under what is known as the town and county co-operative fire law. Under the basis of mutual insurance, upon which the companies did business, fixed assessments were levied upon the various members of the company who bought insurance. In this way those who went into the organization were all protected. The different companies had quite a clientele in the different localities. But the 4,300 members rebelled when additional assessments were levied.

Mr. Hotchkiss sent an examiner, who learned that there was owing $21,000 of insurance claims which could not be paid. This being reported to Mr. Hotchkiss, he obtained an order from the court to liquidate the seven companies, and Frederick G. Dunham, an attorney, of this city, was appointed a special deputy to close up the afafirs of the concerns. To make up the amount of the defaulted claims an assessment will be levied on all of the 4,300 members.

NATURALIZATION TOO SLOW.

Citizens' Union Asks Senator Root to Have Procedure Reformed.

Senator Elihu Root has been asked by the Citizens' Union to aid its efforts to reform what members regard as serious defects in the naturalization laws. According to officers of the union, it will require $25,000, in addition to a revision of the law, to make the bureau efficient in admitting desirable citizens to this country. Senator Root has written the union that he will give the matter immediate attention.

Some idea of the desire on the part of desirable aliens to become citizens and the long delays imposed on them, officers of the union say, may be gained from letters received daily since the announcement was made that the union would help aliens to become naturalized. Here is one of the letters given out yesterday:

> Citizens' Union: Kindly let me know if you could help me to go through the red tape proceedings of getting my last citizen's papers. Have procured my first ones about nine years ago.

Another wrote:

> Citizens' Union: A notice in the newspapers states that you give assistance in getting naturalization papers. If this is correct I beg you to inform me how to proceed. I have been in the city since 1893 and have had my first papers since June, 1899.

A man now in the United States Army called at the offices of the union yesterday, saying he had had his first papers five years. His record as a soldier was found so good as to obtain for him promotion to Sergeant, and yet after several attempts he has not been able to secure his second papers.

A visit to the Naturalization Bureau revealed the fact that applicants frequently take their place in line overnight in a vain effort to reach the clerks when the day's work begins. On one night this week 400 men were found in line, waiting for the doors to open. The day following the machinery of the bureau turned out 25 naturalization papers, and the remaining 375 were turned away hopeless.

One man near the head of the line said he wouldn't take $25 for his position. Another of the 375 who had vainly stood in line practically all night declared that, much as he would like to become a citizen, he was almost in despair of ever succeeding. It was too costly, he said. He could not afford to lose the time from his business which the issuing of his papers called for.

Mr. Henry W. Savage, not to be behindhand with "Ein Herbstmanoever," the foreign operetta, over which there has been a quarrel about the American producing rights, brought the piece into the Knickerbocker Theatre last night, where a sweltering audience saw a sweltering company of actors and singers doing their best to be comfortable under the circumstances. The audience, too, did its best to encourage them in that laudable effort. The actors needed encouragement; as to whether most of them deserved it—that is another matter.

The fact is this new military operetta, rechristened "The Gay Hussars," makes rather more demands than most of them are prepared to meet. It is a difficult thing at best to get an audience into a serious mood at a performance which is chiefly represented as providing light amusement, and when the usual operatic or musical comedy fun is to be immediately followed by scenes that are sentimental or pathetic the actors to succeed with it will be those only who can really approach the situations with a good deal of sincerity and finesse.

At a drama half the work is often done before the actors arrive, for the audience comes prepared to be serious. In the case of an entertainment like the one shown last night more depends upon the actors. For the music requires something more than treacle tones, and the book contains scenes which must be well acted if they are to seem like anything but burlesque and bathos.

No wonder then that the audience rose to Bobby North, a transplanted vaudeville comedian, when he sang a noisy song in the last act in which he told all about his "Friend Label," and to Miss Florence Reid, a pretty little ingenué, who has yet a lot to learn about acting and singing, but who had one of those fetching little numbers about the "bold, bad men"—the kind of song that enabled her to point a warning finger at supposed representatives of the naughty sex in the boxes and first row, whereat some of those designated looked highly pleased, and others seemed quite sheepish.

Things of this kind my be trusted to keep a Summer night audience in a good humor, and there are usually people around to do them. It is more difficult, apparently, to get a man to play a heartbroken, jilted Captain of Hussars, who meets the lady who has sold herself for gold, and who would win him back again—it is very difficult, indeed, to find one to do this who can also sing.

This one has to drink glass after glass of vodka, break glasses, then break into a furious czardas, and end by a denunciation of one lady and a proposed marriage to another, then come out heroically in a climax in which, amid noise of guns and cannon without and scenes of revelry within, he is suddenly confronted by an irate commander, who demands his sword, orders his buttons cut off, and relegates him to the ranks with threats of a courtmartial.

That is the big scene of "The Gay Hussars"—the end of the second act—but when the Captain in the scene that followed announced that he must either marry the girl to whom he had proposed or shoot himself it was apparent that nobody but himself was very much concerned about it. The audience tittered, which in a serious scene has been known to be fatal. Mr. Edwin Wilson was the unhappy Captain, most unhappily.

As the operetta developed last night it was rather an unwieldy, slow-moving affair. The music is often very pleasant, however, and if Miss Anna Bussert, for example, had been in a position to display only her agreeable quality of singing voice, instead of being allowed to do Mrs. Patrick Campbell stunts all over the stage, it is certain she would have created a better impression.

As it was between her "dramatic" scenes with the heart-broken Captain, and the deep-in-the-throat moanings of an old retainer on the Baroness's estate, who went around showing and talking of his devotion to his young master, the Captain, there was a surplus of the sentimental. As the old retainer Mr. Frank Montgomery was impossibly melodramatic—impossible even in operetta.

Nor is the love interest helped by the introduction of a somewhat portly soubrette in the role of one of the lovers. Muriel Terry, who bears the made-in-Germany label, is a clever young woman, who knows how to get things over the footlights, and in two rollicking songs, supported by the full chorus, she was splendidly received. But a spruce-looking, dapper youth would have helped in creating an illusion, which, in fact, is what is chiefly lacking throughout the entire entertainment. The best bit of acting in the piece is provided by William E. Bonner as an excitable Field Marshal.

There is a capital climax to the first act, in which a stageful of militiamen are lulled to sleep under the influence of their drillmaster's prosy stories, and there is a delightful waltz number a little later, in which a large number of people take part; then there are also several spirited songs, and a funny scene in which Bobby North as the clumsy Captain of militia shows his ignorance of tactics.

But "The Gay Hussars," as it stands, is often more grave than gay. It needs good acting, and it needs pulling together. A few more attractive faces in the chorus, and a sense of harmony in color in costumes, which, for the most part, are garish in color and overloaded with ornament, would help some, also.

AMUSEMENT NOTES.

John Drew will begin his annual season at the Empire Theatre on Sept. 6, with a two weeks' engagement in "Jack Straw" with the original New York cast. On Tuesday, Sept. 21, Mr. Drew will appear in a new comedy by M. de Caillavet and M. de Flors.

James T. Powers will resume his interrupted starring engagement in "Havana" at the Casino Theatre on Monday evening, Aug. 9. The production and costumes will be new.

The Allison-Ziegler Company announces that it has arranged for Digby Bell to star this season with Kathleen Clifford in a three-act comedy entitled "The Debtors," a translation from a German play by Fritz von Schoenthau, made by Margaret Mayo, and founded on Dickens's "Little Dorrit."

The Shuberts have selected "The Wizard" as the title of the new musical production in which Sam Bernard is to star under their management this season. The book is by Hartley Manners, the lyrics by Robert B. Smith, and the music by Julian Edwards.

'CANTERBURY PILGRIMS' SEEN

Outdoor Performance of Mackaye's Play Given at Columbia.

It was hot last night for a journey to Canterbury, or anywhere else, but several hundred pilgrims, some of whom had read their Chaucer, crowded the campus back of the gymnasium at Columbia University to see a performance of Percy Mackaye's Canterbury play done by the Coburn Players.

A play presented out of doors always gains a certain charm, and even this one, which for anything in its content might as well be done in the theatre, was made exceedingly picturesque by its background of green boughs, which brought out the bright colors of the costumes. And when Geoffrey Chaucer spoke of the stars to the Prioress there were real stars to point to, for the sky was faultless.

"The Canterbury Pilgrims" has been accessible in bookform for some time, and it has been acted before a few times, but the present production seems to indicate that it might meet with a more enduring fate. Percy Mackaye has slightly rearranged the comedy for use out of doors, but the spirit of Chaucer is intact, and so joyous a character as the Wife of Bath, who reminds one of a female Falstaff, is sure of a welcome before any audience.

The play was staged under the direction of Augustin Duncan, who deserves all praise, and he also played the part of the lisping friar, assisting greatly in the farcical scenes with Miss Helen Harrington as the Wife of Bath. Mr. Coburn, for whom the company is named, played the Poet with dignity, and Miss Ivah Wills was a gentle Prioress. "The Canterbury Pilgrims" will be repeated to-night and Saturday night, and Saturday afternoon "The Merchant of Venice" will be the bill. The performances are given in connection with the Department of English of Columbia University.

MISS HENNING ENGAGED.

She Will Marry the Marquis Antoine de Charette in the Autumn.

Announcement of the engagement of the Marquis Antoine de Charette to Miss Susanne Henning, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Williamson Henning of Tuxedo Park, reached here yesterday from Paris.

The Marquis is the son of Gen. Baron de Charette of Paris and of the Baroness de Charette, who was Miss Antoinette Polk of Tennessee, a niece of President James K. Polk. He is 28 years old, and will inherit a plantation in Tennessee from his mother. From his father he will succeed to the possession of some of the greatest art treasures in France.

Gen. Barone de Charette distinguished himself in the Franco-Prussian war, and was at one time commander of the Pontifical Zouaves at the Vatican. He stands high among the personages of Catholic Europe. His mother was a stepsister of Henry V. of France, who as a child reigned for a few hours, when his grandfather, Charles X., abdicated, in a vain effort to preserve the throne to his line.

James W. Henning is a member of the New York Stock Exchange. Miss Henning made her début in society two years ago. She is well known as a whip, and has taken a prominent part in amateur theatricals on several occasions.

No date has been set for the wedding, but it will probably take place in this country in the early Fall.

MME. NORDICA WEDS G. W. YOUNG IN LONDON

Frederick Townsend Martin Is Best Man at Quiet Ceremony in Grosvenor Square.

CARTER GIVES HER AWAY

After Reception at Claridge's, Couple Starts on Yacht Cruise—Will Return to America Later.

LONDON, July 29.—George W. Young, the banker of New York, and Mme. Lillian Nordica were married at King's Weigh House Church in Grosvenor Square at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon, in the presence of a few friends, most of whom are well known in American and English society.

Mme. Nordica wore a beautiful gown of pale gray satin, the corsage being covered with rare old Venetian lace. She wore no hat or veil, but instead a chaplet of laurel leaves. Her only ornament was a string of handsome pearls, a gift from the bridegroom.

James R. Carter, the Secretary of the American Embassy in London, gave away the bride, and Frederick Townsend Martin of New York was best man. Mme. Nordica's sisters, Mrs. Emil Del Castillo and Mrs. Baldwin, and W. Fenton Chauncey accompanied her to the church.

The small church was decorated with palms and white lilies. The service was that of the Church of England, and the "Lohengrin" Wedding March was played when the bridal couple entered the church. There were no bridesmaids.

At the conclusion of the ceremony Mme. Nordica stopped while going down the aisle to shake hands with a number of friends.

A reception was held at Claridge's after the wedding, at which a number of prominent persons were present. Later the couple left for Southampton to embark on Mr. Young's yacht for a month's cruise. They will return to London before going to America.

The presents included valuable diamonds and pearls from the bridegroom, and gifts from Ambassador and Mrs. Whitelaw Reid, the Secretary of the American Embassy and Mrs. Carter, the Dowager Duchess of Manchester, the Countess of Shrewsbury, Lady Lister-Kaye, Sir Alfred Turner, and Mrs. Frank Mackey.

The engagement of Mme. Lillian Nordica to George Washington Young, banker, was announced several times in the last year, but was denied frequently by both parties concerned. Rumors were set at rest not long ago, however, when the singer, returning from a tour through Canada, made a formal announcement of her engagement at a dinner given at the Plaza.

This is Mme. Nordica's third matrimonial venture. While singing in Paris in 1882 she met Frederic Gower, a newspaper man of Providence, R. I., and she became his wife the next year. Gower was reported lost while making a balloon trip across the English Channel. Of his $500,000 estate she received $40,000.

On May 27, 1896, Mme. Nordica married Zoltan Doeme, a Hungarian tenor, in Indianapolis. This marriage was no more successful than her first, and she secured a divorce in 1904.

Mme. Nordica, whose real name is Lillian Norton, was born at Farmington, Me., about fifty-four years ago. In 1875 she began her public career as the soprano of Grace Church, Boston. In 1878 she visited Europe as soloist with Gilmore's Band, after which she went to Milan to study for opera.

She made her operatic début in 1880 at a theatre in Brescia in "La Traviata." She sang in that year in the Italian cities and then went to St. Petersburg, where she was very successful. She made her début at the Opéra in Paris on July 21, 1881, as Marguerite in "Faust." In 1883 she made her first appearance in opera in New York at the Academy of Music in the same part. Since then she has sung here more or less continuously and will be a member of the forces of the Metropolitan Opera House during the coming season, when she will sing Isolde, and Kundry in "Parsifal."

George Washington Young has long been a prominent figure in social and financial circles in New York. He was born on July 1, 1864, in Jersey City. His father was Peter Young, who for years was Night Superintendent of Colgate's soap factory. His start in life was as an office boy in the law offices of L. & A. Zabriskie. This was at the age of thirteen, but later he entered the Hudson County Bank of Jersey City, and at the age of nineteen was occupying the responsible position of receiving teller.

At the age of twenty-two he was the Secretary and Treasurer of the New Jersey Title Guarantee and Trust Company, and at the age of twenty-eight he was elected Vice President and Treasurer of the United States Mortgage and Trust Company, rising to the Presidency a year later. He is still interested in that company, but he is now Vice President of the Windsor Trust Company.

He is also a Director of the Père Marquette Railroad Company, the National Bank of Commerce, the Interborough Rapid Transit Company, the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton Railroad Company, and the Casualty Company of America. He is also head of the banking firm of George W. Young & Co. of 59 Cedar Street.

He was married on Nov. 28, 1889, to Miss Natalie Bray, and two children were born of this union—Dorothy, now aged fifteen, and George Washington, Jr., aged 12. Mrs. Young secured a divorce in Trenton, N. J., in January, 1908, charging desertion. The suit was not contested by Mr. Young.

Music at Manhattan Beach.

The new concert pavilion, erected for Lieut. Charles Carleton's British Guards' Band, will be dedicated to-morrow afternoon and evening at the Manhattan Beach Hotel. In addition to selection by the band there will be vocal selections by the Schumann Quartette of mixed voices, and the Kreutzer Quartette Club of New York, made up of 150 male voices. This club competed for the Kaiser's Prize at the recent saengerfest at Madison Square Garden. There will be an illumination and salutes in the evening under the direction of Henry J. Pain.

PETER FOR THE ROYAL SUITE

Is the Hammerstein Monkey—He Is Not a Servian Heir.

"Prince Peter," for whom the royal suite at the Plaza has been ordered reserved, as exclusively announced in a morning newspaper yesterday, is not the Prince of Servia, as the same authority thought he might be. It is not even certain that the suite was ordered by wireless from the Philadelphia, as it was said had been done, because it is unusual, at least for the Philadelphia, to communicate by wireless with the shore, while still in midocean, her apparatus being hardly powerful enough for that purpose.

There is, however, a Peter who can be called a Prince if anybody wants to call him so, though he doesn't come from Servia—aboard the Philadelphia. He is the Hammerstein monkey, soon expected to be a sensation in vaudeville here.

The manager of the Plaza admitted yesterday the request for the reservation of the royal suite, but was not so sure that the expected guest would occupy it.

"The reservation was asked by Mr. Hammerstein," he said. "It is the dull season, and we made the reservation."

PENNSYLVANIA FERRY CHANGE

Lower Decks Soon to be Given Up Entirely to Vehicles.

The Pennsylvania Railroad is already preparing plans for changing its ferryboats that run between Jersey City and New York so that there will be more room for trucks. The lower decks are to be given up entirely to vehicular traffic, only the upper decks being reserved for passengers. These boats cost between $200,000 and $300,000 each. The cost of the alterations has not been estimated.

The railroad is to make this change because the tunnel service will cut down greatly the passenger traffic on the ferryboats and because, on the other hand, the tunnels are expected to increase the number of factories on the Jersey side of the river, with a consequent increase in the heavy truck traffic on the ferries.

Already, it was stated yesterday, the vehicular traffic has been more than the ferries could easily handle. Often, especially in the Winter months, Exchange Place in Jersey City was crowded for hours with trucks waiting for a chance to cross the river. The expense of the waiting horses and men will be cut down by the additional service on the ferryboats, and the owners of the trucks will be glad to pay the higher price which the railroad will soon charge for this ferry service.

HOTEL HAS WOMAN ARRESTED.

Court Reluctant to Hold Widow with Three Children.

A woman who registered at the Astor House as "Mrs. M. Hamilton Baddour" of Chicago on Wednesday night was arrested there yesterday afternoon on complaint of the Broadway Central Hotel, charged with leaving that house with a bill of $71.50 unpaid. When arrested by the special officer of the Broadway Central Hotel, she had with her her three small children, Gertrude, 6; Gladys, 5, and George, 2 years old.

She had no money and had not paid her bill. She was taken to the Jefferson Market Court, where Edward Webb, brother of Daniel Webb, proprietor of the Broadway Central, was on hand to prosecute. Webb talked about making an example of the woman.

Magistrate Moss wiped his glasses after looking at the three children, all handsome and well dressed. Then he sent the woman off the bridge.

"What?" asked Magistrate Moss, "Send those children to a society for keeping. Not unless you really compel me to. I'll hear what the mother has to say first."

The woman said she lived at 167 Meeker Avenue, Brooklyn. That she was a dressmaker, and supported her children. Her right name was the one she had registered under at the Astor House, she said. It was true she had registered as Jane Hamilton in the Broadway Central. But she denied that she had told Webb that her husband was living in Chicago. She had been widowed two years, she said.

The woman said she had a position with a local house as dressmaker, and would pay the bill. She said that she left the Broadway Central under the belief that a friend had settled her account.

GET ALLEGED SMUGGLERS.

Two Italians Held for Bringing in Coral Without Paying Duty.

The smuggling into this port from Italy of coral and medallions, which the customs officials have labored so hard to prevent, has evidently broken out again. Two Italians were arrested yesterday and locked up at Brooklyn Police Headquarters to be turned over to the Federal authorities to-day.

The police have also recovered some $2,000 worth of the goods, which they allege had been smuggled into this port within the last few days. The prisoners are Ciro Sorrentino and Vincenzo Omerato, young men who said they were jewelers and gave their address as 333 East 143d Street.

Sorrentino is said to have arrived from Italy within a very short time. The officials, it is said, caught him leaving a pier with about $1,000 worth of medallions in a cotton belt about his waist. Following up the clues gained, they went to his house and there arrested Omerato. At that address the police say the rest of the goods were found in a bag.

FRENCH HEELS ON MOUNTAINS

Honeymoon Couple in Ceremonious Garb Went Over Five of Them.

CRAWFORD, N. H., July 29.—A remarkable trip, considering the conditions under which it was made, was accomplished to-day by Mr. and Mrs. W. Monroe Roberts of Long Island City, N. Y., who are passing their honeymoon here. They walked from the summit of Mount Washington over Franklin, Clay, Pleasant, and Clinton Mountains to the Crawford House, a distance of nine miles.

The trip was unique from the fact that neither was attired for mountain work, Mr. Roberts wearing a frock coat, tall hat, and light patent leather shoes. Mrs. Roberts had on a light dress, a Paris hat, and high French heeled shoes.

Both went up Mount Washington on the morning train, and, not realizing the perils of the journey on foot, undertook to walk back to Crawford. Mrs. Roberts collapsed at several points, but revived each time. She and her husband arrived here to-night in an exhausted condition.

GEN. H. C. WORTHINGTON DEAD

He Was the Friend of Lincoln and Grant—Last of Lincoln's Pallbearers.

WASHINGTON, July 29.—Gen. Henry C. Worthington, formerly a member of the California Legislature, and Congressman from Nevada, died at the Garfield Hospital here to-day of cerebral hemorrhage. He was 81 years old.

Gen. Worthington had been Collector of the Port of Charleston, S. C.; head of a vigilance committee in California, Minister to Uruguay, Judge of a United States court, Major General of Militia, and is said to have come within two votes of being elected United States Senator from Nebraska. He was an uncle of Representative Pearre of Maryland.

He enjoyed a warm personal friendship with both President Lincoln and President Grant, and for years he had been the sole survivor of that group of men who were chosen to bear the body of Lincoln to its sepulchre.

He was born in Maryland. Gen. Worthington made a fortune in California's gold mines in the days of '49. A year later he joined the expedition of William Walker to seize the State of Sonora and wrest it from Mexico.

Of late years he had lived in Washington, often being at the Capitol during the sessions of Congress. It was while leaving the Capitol early in July that he suffered a stroke of paralysis, and was removed to the hospital, blind and helpless.

MISS HARRIET WARD DEAD.

Great-granddaughter of Gen. Ward Kept Open House in Ward Home.

Special to The New York Times.

WORCESTER, Mass., July 29.—Miss Harriet Ward, great-granddaughter of Gen. Artemas Ward, who was the first Major General of the Continental Army in the American Revolution, next in command to Washington, died yesterday afternoon in the old Ward homestead in Shrewsbury from cancer of the stomach. She was 66 years old.

Miss Ward made her home in New York, but went to Shrewsbury every Summer to open the historic old house for the entertainment of tourists. She always kept the dining room arranged as it was in Revolutionary days, and, as the homestead was on the main road from Boston to the west, she entertained hundreds of visitors, who came in automobiles.

Blind Newsdealer Dead.

Mrs. Katherine Hefferan, 72 years old, who had kept for many years the news stand in front of the Columbian Theatre, Washington Street, Brooklyn, died yesterday in her home, 24 Chapel Street. She came from Ireland when she was 11 years old and married Thomas Hefferan. She had six children, but they all died, and her husband followed them, leaving her to fight the world alone. She became totally blind of cataract, but cheerfully supported herself under all kinds of adversity with tireless industry.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Active and Strong—Call Money Rates, 1¾@2 Per Cent.

WIDER DEMAND FOR STOCKS

New York Central Group Prominent in Trading—Spanish Disorders Affect Foreign Markets—Time Money Up.

A considerable enlargement in public interest in securities and an extension of activity to departments hitherto neglected were the chief features of interest in yesterday's stock market. The wider scope of dealings and the broader inquiry for stocks outside of the precincts of Wall Street resulted in a market rather notable for general strength. In the railroad list the New York Central group, led by that road itself with an advance of 3 points, was in demand throughout the day, and so were also the shares of the Southern roads, including Southern Railway, Louisville & Nashville, and Atlantic Coast Line, and the Harriman stocks. In the industrial department issues of the independent steel companies were active and strong, while miscellaneous companies of this category which rose sharply included American Telephone and Telegraph, American Sugar, International Paper, American Cotton Oil, and American Locomotive. All in all the demonstration of quiet strength, unaccompanied as it was by speculative excesses in any quarter of the market, made the session one of the most impressive and convincing witnessed on the Exchange in many weeks. The course of the market was made even more noteworthy by reason of the fact that certain of the day's developments were, superficially at least, of a deterrent character. Thus Washington dispatches in the afternoon described the tariff situation as discouraging. The President and the conference committee were described as dead-locked over Mr. Taft's recommendations for lower duties on certain articles, and in the late advices it was even suggested that resentment over the President's suggestions was running so strong that there was talk of an adjournment of Congress without action on the tariff. Again European markets were openly unsettled by the precarious state of affairs in Spain. Spanish securities were extremely weak on the Paris Bourse, and on that market at least fears were entertained of an extension of the disorders to the proportions of a revolution. In Wall Street, however, the disposition was very plainly to minimize such occurrences and presumably with reason. The underlying sources of strength in the entire financial situation, as illustrated in the growth of business everywhere and the splendid progress of the crops, are too obvious and too sure to leave room for anxieties over the situation in either Washington or Madrid.

Quotably higher rates for time money were put into effect by a number of banking institutions yesterday, and while the interior demand for crop-moving money is not expected to reach anything like respectable dimensions for several weeks, preliminary inquiries and arrangements are instilling conservatism among lenders. The banks gained again on routine transactions with the Sub-Treasury, and with smaller gold exports and a fair surplus on the interior movement another favorable bank statement is indicated. The weekly report of the Bank of England disclosed the maintenance of its unusually high reserve percentage.

THE COTTON MARKET.

Stronger on Fears of Drought—Closes Steady 6 to 11 Points Up.

Cotton showed some irregularity yesterday, but the general tendency was upward on apprehensions of further damage to crop prospects through a renewal of dry hot weather in the Southwest. Unfavorable foreign advices caused some selling. The close was steady at a net advance of 6@11 points.

OUTSIDE SECURITIES

Trading in Larger Volume, Although Price Movements Continue Narrow.

AMERICAN TOBACCO ACTIVE

After Opening 2½ Points Up the Shares Go to 474, Only to Drop 8 Points at Close—Copper Irregular.

Curb trading was in somewhat better volume yesterday, although price movements continued narrow. The coppers were generally strong, with a few fractional gains in evidence at the close. In the industrial list American Tobacco common was again the feature, reporting sales of 540 shares at prices ranging between 466 and 474. The close was at the low price of the day, although after the opening at 469 the quotation moved up to 474. The bond list was sluggish, and trading in this department was without feature.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Central Crosses Pennsylvania.

New York Central, which has been running neck and neck with Pennsylvania, outstripped it yesterday, reaching 140 apparently with no difficulty whatever. In some respects the stocks are similar, particularly in that the purely investment holdings in both corporations are very large. There is scarcely a person of any means living along the line of the New York Central who does not have at least a few shares of the stock in his strongbox, and the same is true of Pennsylvania. Also, whenever either stock has experienced any pronounced decline in the last few years, investment absorption has been accomplished in very large volume. There is a difference in the dividend rate of 1 per cent. in favor of Pennsylvania, but the enthusiasts on New York Central hope that this will be overcome within a year. Yesterday's sharp advance in the stock was accompanied by a revival of the rumors concerning a holding company project which would embrace all the so-called Vanderbilt lines. Of course, there were some who insisted that part of that $50,000,000 or more cash supposed to be in the Union Pacific treasury was being put out to earn its keep in New York Central.

⁂

Tractions Rise on Earnings.

Interborough-Metropolitan issues, which had been depressed since the beginning of the week—in fact, since last Friday, when the violent break in those shares occurred—found much better support yesterday. The understanding that the forthcoming report of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company will show about 3 per cent. earned on Interborough-Metropolitan preferred stock encouraged outside buying of that issue, which again lifted it across 47. Probably as much or more divergent information is to be had on the Interborough-Metropolitan issues than on any other stock in the list. Bull points and bear ones are to be had simultaneously, each put forth with equal confidence, in different sections. In the long run, however, earnings are what count with any corporation and the price of its securities.

⁂

Weakness in Exchange.

International bankers did not appear to take very seriously the Spanish troubles, if the movement of foreign exchange could be taken as a reliable indication of their opinions. Usually the international money markets are the first to reflect serious apprehensions concerning the outbreak of open hostilities in any country, or between rival Nations. Sterling rates here, however, declined sharply, reaching $4.87 for demand sterling, and there did not seem to be the slightest ripple of excitement over any possible complications as an outcome of the Spanish uprising which would involve seriously other countries either financially or physically. London, too, purchased a moderate amount of stocks on balance in our market, which, of course, tended to influence exchange toward a lower level, and the hardening in time money rates here operated in the same direction. The latter circumstance facilitated the negotiations of additional loans abroad by our bankers.

⁂

Jump in Western Union Bonds.

An advance of about 2 points in Western Union convertible bonds was the feature of that section of the market. The stock also rose about a point, and suggestions of a dividend increase at the next period were again heard, but did not appear to be taken very seriously by the best-informed interests. The rise in the price of the bonds, however, to around 93 called forth fresh rumors of the prospective establishment of closer relations between the Western Union Telegraph Company and American Telephone and Telegraph interests. A more prosaic explanation, and one known to be founded on fact, was that a large banking house, which had accumulated a big block of these bonds at low prices, had been peddling them out all the way up, and finally had disposed of the last of its holdings. This naturally decreased the supply coming upon the market, and left it responsive to any big buying orders which might be placed. The advanced quotations at which most stocks are selling have led speculative investors to scrutinize closely the convertible bonds, and apparently some of them decided that the Western Unions presented good possibilities for a profit on their investment beyond what might be received on the interest account.

⁂

Tariff Complications Ignored.

Despite the fact that Washington dispatches told of fresh complications in the tariff situation which might indefinitely delay the final enactment of the bill, traders paid little attention to that phase of the situation. Indeed, there was less heard about the tariff as a market factor than there had been at any time for a week previously. When the market is extremely dull and inclined to heaviness every one goes on a hunt for the reason, and recently tariff talk had been figuring prominently in market gossip. At other times the threatened deadlock at Washington might well have precipitated heavy selling of stock, at least by the professionals, but few of them bothered much about that matter. They thought they saw evidences of a resumption of aggressive bull leadership, and were perfectly willing to follow the lead without delving too deeply into causes.

METAL MARKET REPORTS.

At the Metal Exchange yesterday extreme dulness prevailed, with scarcely any change in prices. All grades of copper were unchanged. Spelter was up slightly, while tin reacted a small fraction. Lead was a shade lower.

In London yesterday on the Metal Exchange spot copper receded 7s. 6d. from the final quotation of Wednesday. Futures also declined from Wednesday night's last price, dropping 6s. 3d. The market finished steady, closing figures ruling at, spot, £58 10s.; futures, £59 7s. 6d.

Pig tin, after a firm opening, developed an easier tendency and ended unchanged for both spot and futures from yesterday's final at £132 17s. 6d. and £134 5s., respectively. Lead was slightly firmer at £12 10s. Spelter was unchanged at £22. Cleveland warrants were firm at 49s. 1½d.

The closing bid and asked prices for copper and other metals for spot delivery on the New York Metal Exchange yesterday compare as follows with those of Wednesday:

COMPANIES MAY KEEP UNPAID GAS REBATES

But Must Give Bond for Their Payment When Claimed, the Court Decides.

DISPOSITION OF INTEREST

Court Will Decide What to Do with It When Returns Are All In—Some Cases of Fraud Found.

Judge Lacombe, in the United States Circuit Court, handed down a decision yesterday holding that the companies involved in the payment of gas rebates under the refund growing out of the eighty-cent gas decision may keep the balance unclaimed by consumers, but must give a bond covering these amounts, so that if the consumers turn up the rebates may be paid to them. The court also ordered that the suits in which the payments are made shall be kept alive, so that he may make from time to time appropriate orders regarding the disposition of the unclaimed balances.

The decision of Judge Lacombe was rendered in response to a request for instructions from United States Commissioner Shields, the Special Master appointed to handle the distribution of the gas rebates. Two companies have thus far turned in their reports of unclaimed balances—the Northern Union Gas Company, which has a balance of about $24,000 rebate money, and the Standard Gas Company, with a balance of more than $70,000.

In his order handed down yesterday the Judge says that while it is desirable to safeguard the rights of the consumers so that any of them properly applying may get their money, nevertheless the expense of the distribution is heavy and should be terminated at the earliest practicable moment. Hence he finds that there is no reason why the refunds should all wait until the last return has been made.

Judge Lacombe remarks that it is hoped that all the returns may be completed early in the Fall, and at that time he will take up the question as to what disposition shall be made of the balance of interest on the rebate money while in the custody of the court. Out of this interest accumulation the expenses of the distribution have been paid, and Commissioner Shields, who has had the distribution in charge, has used every effort to quicken the process. As it is, the time for completing the payments comes somewhat quicker than was originally expected.

Report has been made to the United States District Attorney's office that some 500 sporadic cases of theft or forgery have been discovered in connection with the distribution of the gas refund. While details have been given in only two or three of these cases, it is understood that there is no indication of a concerted plan by any considerable number of people, but that the offenses have been individual instances of dishonesty.

Yesterday Commissioner Shields had before him Albert L. Fremoyer, a hotel clerk, who has been living at 147 West Sixty-fourth Street in lodgings formerly occupied by Mrs. K. F. Wagner, who is living now at another address. It is charged that he received a letter addressed to Mrs. Wagner containing the rebate check, discovered its contents, and then wrote to her that he had important papers belonging to her which he would deliver for a consideration.

A payment of $5 was finally agreed upon, and Mrs. Wagner got her rebate check. She told her story to the company, and the complaint followed.

GRAIN AND PROVISIONS.

WHEAT.—Cooler and clear weather on the morning map yesterday broke early prices practically a cent. It was felt that rust would be checked by the lower temperatures. In the late afternoon there was a renewal of rust complaints from North Dakota, and prices ran up almost 2c, near months leading. Export rumors were conflicting. Liverpool started strong and higher, but fell away quickly, and at the close was ⅛d net higher to ¼d net lower. Russian offerings continued liberal. The Berlin market, owing to continued poor thrashing returns, was 1¾c net higher. The interior movement aggregated 1,176,000 bushels, against 933,000 last year. It was reported here that about all of the freight room at Genoa had been engaged for November and December. Cash wheat in New York closed steady: No. 2 red, new, $1.22, elevator; No. 2 red, new, free on board afloat, $1.16½, end August; No. 1 Northern Duluth, $1.38⅝, and new No. 2 hard Winter, $1.15⅝, nominal, both free on board, afloat.

CORN.—The market had another strong advance until in the late afternoon there was some reaction under profit-taking. The weather continued very favorable, and Argentine shipments were estimated at 3,600,000 bushels, or 1,000,000 more than last year. Liverpool was ¼d net higher. No. 2 corn in New York closed 80c elevator for old and 63¾c for new, free on board, afloat, Winter shipment.

THE EUROPEAN MARKETS.

American Securities Close Steady on the London Exchange.

LONDON, July 29.—Money was in quiet demand on the market to-day, and discounts were steady.

Trading on the Stock Exchange was dull, with an easy tendency. In spite of the satisfactory conclusion of the settlement, most departments were lower. The coal trade trouble unsettled British securities, but home rails closed firmer on provincial buying. The Spanish news caused a decline of 1⅛ in Spanish bonds, which depressed foreigners generally, but the former closed above the lowest for the day. Copper shares were easy, with the metal and Mexican rails weakened on realizations.

American securities opened irregular, and later hardened on light buying of Union Pacific and Southern Pacific. At noon the market was steady and prices ruled from ⅛ to ¾ higher than yesterday's New York closing. The American was the most cheerful section in the afternoon. Prices hardened further, but drooped on receipt of the Wall Street opening. Later a recovery occurred and the market closed steady.

Bar silver steady, 23⅝d per ounce.

Money ¾ per cent.

The rate of discount in the open market for short bills is 1¼ per cent.; for three months' bills, 1⅜@1 7-16 per cent.

PARIS, July 29.—Prices on the Bourse to-day opened weak on the Spanish situation, but they recovered slightly at the close. Spanish securities also closed above the worst.

Three per cent. rentes, 97f 67½c for the account.

FOREIGN TRADE OPPORTUNITIES.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 29.—The Daily Consular and Trade reports for to-morrow show the following trade opportunities abroad. Further information regarding these may be obtained by addressing the Bureau of Manufactures, care of Department of Commerce and Labor, Washington, D. C., giving the number of the item referred to:

3694. FLOATING WINGS—A firm of importers in a city in the United Kingdom has expressed a desire to the American Consul to be put in communication with manufacturers in the United States of floating wings used for the purpose of teaching swimming.

3695. CONTRACTORS' AND ARCHITECTS' SUPPLIES—An American Consul in the West Indies gives the name of a prominent house in his district importing contractors' and architects' supplies. Cement, reinforced steel, shutters, concrete, and hoisting machinery, drawing instruments, and materials are the lines carried. This firm would also like to see samples of American trade journals.

3696. PIER CONSTRUCTION—The Harbor Board of a European port has decided on extensive pier construction and other water front improvements. This is made the subject of a report by an American Consul, who also sends a map showing the proposed work. A copy of the report and map may be had by interested firms upon application to the Bureau of Manufactures.

3697. REPRESENTATION IN BELGIUM—A business man in Belgium informs an American Consular officer that he desires to communicate with one or more firms in the United States relative to representing them in that country. He states that the opening of the International Exposition of Brussels in 1910 will afford excellent opportunity to introduce new articles abroad, and furnishes a number of references as to his standing.

3698. FIRE ENGINES—An American Consul in Canada writes that a steam fire engine, to cost from $5,000 to $5,500, will be wanted in a city in that district within a few months. The address of the public officer who has charge of the matter is given.

3699. FROZEN POULTRY AND GAME—An American firm with a large agency in a European city believes that an excellent market can be found in that country for frozen poultry and game, and expects to enter into correspondence with the principal dealers in the United States established in the poultry raising district. Quotations, free on board at shipping points are desired. An American Consul forwards the address of this concern.

3700. ELECTRICAL SIGNS—A dealer in electrical apparatus informs an American Consul in a European city that he would like to communicate with manufacturers of electric signs, desirous of selling their patent rights in that country.

3701. REPRESENTATION IN BELGIUM—A Belgian engineer writes to the American Consul and wishes to communicate with an American firm desiring to be represented at the forthcoming universal and international exposition in Brussels in 1910. This man says he has had a long experience in dealing with factory equipment, mines, and electrical tramway lines, and in public work enterprises. He states that he has good commercial connection, and speaks the principal languages of Europe.

3702. GENERAL MERCHANDISE—A merchant in the West Indies states to the American Consul that he would like to do business direct with manufacturers in the United States. He handles gray sheetings, prints, drills, crash, and cotton; also boots and shoes, wire nails, lamps, glassware, files, rope, &c.

3703. REPRESENTATION IN EUROPE—The bureau is in receipt of a letter from a business man who will shortly go to Europe for an extended stay. He has had previous experience abroad, and is particularly familiar with the language and business conditions in France. Satisfactory references will be given.

3704. CINEMATOGRAPH FILMS—An American Consular officer reports that a business man in his district desires to enter into relations with manufacturers of cinematograph films in the United States. The inquirer is convinced that the field is a good one if the films are new in subject, and he would like to obtain the agency for his city.

3705. SAFES—In response to an inquiry from the United States an American Consular officer in Italy says that there will be quite a demand for safes in Messina in the near future. He gives the address of a man well qualified to act as agent for manufacturers of safes seeking a market in Italy, and further adds that a reliable representative is the most effective method of introducing such goods.

WON'T DISCUSS NOTE ISSUE.

Rumors of Bethlehem Steel $5,000,000 Output Can't Be Confirmed.

Rumors current in Wall Street yesterday that the Bethlehem Steel Corporation was about to put out $5,000,000 short term notes to take up the $2,500,000 notes of the Bethlehem Steel Company issued in 1907 and to finance improvements could not be confirmed. The bankers who have been identified with the financing of the corporation expressed surprise at the stories, and in the absence of President Schwab from town nothing definite could be learned about the plans, which, it is understood, are under discussion.

The $2,500,000 notes issued in 1907 bear 6 per cent. interest and mature serially. The first installment of $500,000 does not fall due until next year and the last in 1912. The company's chief need for new funds at the present time is for the extension of the structural steel plant built three years ago, which has proved a great success.

It is said that the company now contemplates building a larger plant for turning out this class of product and will enlarge the steel plant by the erection of an additional group of ten open-hearth furnaces.

BOSTON STOCK MARKET.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, July 29.—The Boston market opened strong this morning, with United States Smelting common the feature. This issue scored a further advance to 52¼ on what was considered excellent buying. There appeared to be comparatively little stock offering on the way up, and the demand was quickly reflected in higher prices. The balance of the market was strong, and generally showed some advance all around as a result of the day's trading. The close was strong and at about top prices for the day.

C. W. WATSON CARRIES OFF FIVE MORE BLUES

Owner of Fairmont Farms Has Won Thirteen First Prizes at Long Branch Horse Show.

McGRANN CANCELS ENTRIES

Pennsylvanian Dissatisfied with Method of Judging—Miss Carolyn Brice Thrown in Jumping Event.

Special to The New York Times.

LONG BRANCH, N. J., July 29.—Society again made its obeisance to King Horse to-day at Hollywood Park, where the third session of the annual exhibition of the Monmouth County Horse Show Association was held. There was a great outpouring of all ranks of society along the New Jersey Coast, and the management frankly admitted that it was the best third day in the history of the association.

Owing to the remarkable success of the Fairmont Farms, it has been suggested that the affair be called the "Watson Show." The owner of Fairmont Farms has annexed thirteen blue ribbons during the three days of the show and a number of red and yellow rosettes. His stable of aristocratic high-steppers is in magnificent condition, and it is a difficult matter to find any harness horses capable of taking the measure of the Watson horses.

Only once during the show has Mr. Watson received a setback, and that was to-day, when Ringing Bells and Chatterbox, from the same stable, won over the international champion pair, Kitty Grey and Norina. Mrs. Watson used all her skill to bring the pair under complete control, but was unable to do so, and was compelled to witness the downfall of her favorites. The pair redeemed themselves later in the afternoon, when they were placed first in the ladies' harness horse class.

One untoward incident to-day disturbed the success that has been characteristic of the show. Richard P. McGrann, the owner of Grand View Farm of Lancaster, formally notified the Horse Show management that he would withdraw all his entries. This action was due to his dissatisfaction with the work of Senator C. W. Barnum of Lime Rock, Conn.; George B. Hulme of New York, and Edward P. Peck of Omaha, Neb., the judges of harness horses and tandems.

Mr. McGrann has felt since the opening of the show that the judges were using wrong methods in determining the winners of the carriage horse events, and freely criticised their decisions. The climax came yesterday, when Lord Baltimore, for the second consecutive year, won the Patten Challenge Cup for the best gig horse. Mr. McGrann confessed his bitter disappointment over the result, and later in the evening decided to take his stable of horses back to Lancaster. His stable manager, Frank Palmer, removed the horses and carriages from the grounds to-day.

A serious accident was narrowly averted in the ladies' hunting class. Miss Carolyn Brice, who rode Mrs. Sophie D. Gummey's bay mare Miss Virginia, was heavily thrown as her horse was about to take the jump. The horse swerved, and Miss Brice lost her seat. She was stunned by the fall, and assisted to the judges' stand in the centre of the ring. It was at first feared that the horse had stepped on her, but examination showed that, except for a bad shaking up, she was uninjured.

Later in the same class Miss Marion Holloway, who rode Miss Eloise Sherin's Interpreter, had a good deal of trouble with her horse, which threatened to become unmanageable. Miss Holloway, who is a clever and fearless horsewoman, kept her seat and finally brought the horse into subjection amid the applause of the spectators, who watched the incident breathlessly. The entire class was below the standard of hunters, and the judges refused to make any awards.

Society prepared itself for a treat when the four-in-hands of J. Campbell Thompson and Paul A. Sorg put in an appearance, nor was there any disappointment in store. Both drivers are experts and a brilliant display was the result. Mr. Thompson, who drove four splendidly matched spanking bays, had trouble from the start with his near wheeler, which acted badly throughout and deprived him of all possibility of a victory. Mr. Sorg handled the reins over four beautiful roans, which were not only well matched but displayed all the good qualities of a road team.

The costumes were unusually attractive and showed more coloring than during the two preceding days. Although white embroideries were again in evidence, there were many stylishly gowned women who wore combinations of colors, which blended harmoniously and formed a fitting foreground to the promenade and grandstand.

Before the show opened there were several luncheons at the Hollywood Inn, Takanassee, and other prominent hostelries. The box parties were unusually big. They included:

Mrs. Frederick Strauss, Mr. and Mrs. B. J. Greenhut, Mrs. Austrean, Mrs. Benjamin Wolf, Mrs. Emma Porson, Mrs. John Minaldi, Mrs. Harburger, Mrs. Karger, Miss Keyser, Miss Mandell of Chicago, Miss Meyer, Mr. and Mrs. Goodby Loew, Mrs. Mary McFadden, Mrs. Potts, Miss Eunice Townley, Miss Pitman West, Dr. John Price, Miss Barrett, and Miss Johnson.

WATSON WINS FIVE MORE BLUES

Owner of Fairmont Farms Has Taken Thirteen in Long Branch Show.

Special to The New York Times.

LONG BRANCH, N. J., July 29.—For the third consecutive day of the annual celebration of the Monmouth County Horse Show Association Clarence W. Watson of Baltimore led the exhibitors. He captured five blue ribbons, making a total of thirteen for the show. He received but one setback during the day, when his second entry in the harness horse class, over 14.1 hands, Ringing Bells and Chatterbox, defeated his international champions, Kitty Grey and Norina. This was the first defeat of the latter pair this year.

The initial class of the afternoon furnished a complete surprise and reversal of form. The event was for harness horses over 14.1 and not exceeding 15 hands. The Fairmont Farms entered two teams, Kitty Grey and Norina, driven by Mrs. C. W. Watson, and Ringing Bells and Chatterbox, handled by Frank Winterbottom. Paul A. Sorg was represented by Tease and Torment; George Watson drove Snapshot and Rifle, and Mrs. Sophie D. Gummey handled the reins over Babette and Babinette. The competition was very close, and all the entries appeared to advantage except Kitty Grey and Norina, which seemed to pull and show signs of restlessness. There was a wave of protest when the judges selected Ringing Bells and Chatterbox as the winners. George Watson captured the red ribbon and Mrs. Watson the third.

Seven ponies faced the judges in the saddle class, but the result was almost a foregone conclusion, as Somerset Farm's gray mare Lady Idol was superior to the other entries, and the same exhibitor's gray mare Roslyn was placed second.

Seldom has a beter field been seen in the pairs of harness horse class, and it required longer than the stipulated time for the judges to arrive at a decision. Once again the Fairmont Farms scored when Lord Baltimore and My Maryland II. received the premier award. The international pair traveled smoothly, with almost perfect action. Paul A. Sorg won second and third with Puritan Maid and Precise ad Dignity and Perfection, respectively.

There was a somewhat disappointing turnout in the roadster class, in which the National Horse Show champion Amanda Bawn was returned a comparatively easy winner. The second prize was captured by Leo Ottinger's bay gelding Nashville, which has scored many victories on the New York Speedway. There was not a dissenting voice heard when the judges selected Udo M. Fleishman's chestnut mare Mayo as the winner of the ladies' saddle class. The winner, which was formerly the property of Mrs. John Gerken, was on her best behavior and made an excellent showing. William C. Bain's The Dude was placed second.

J. Campbell Thompson and Paul A. Sorg sent entries in the four-in-hand class for road teams. Mr. Campbell drove his own four, while W. Grant tooled the Sorg quartet. The near wheeler of the Thompson team acted badly from the start. Even with this disadvantage, Mr. Thompson made a gallant fight, but the odds were too great and Mr. Sorg's entry secured the coveted ribbon.

An hour's rest had a beneficial effect on Kitty Grey and Norina, and when Mrs. Watson brought the pair into the arena for the pairs of horses not exceeding 15.2 hands, they showed style, conformation, and splendid manners. Mrs. Watson drove admirably and was cheered when her horses secured the blue ribbon.

The ladies' jumping class was a disappointing affair. Four entries appeared, but neither of the horses performed to the satisfaction of the judges, who declined to make any award. It was in this event that Miss Carolyn Bryce was thrown at the jump, and Miss Marion Halloway had considerable trouble with Interpreter.

C. W. Watson's Lord Baltimore and My Maryland II. outclassed the other entries in the heavyweight harness class and earned the blue ribbon. Paul A. Sorg won second and third.

A new exhibitor won the novice saddle class and upset all predictions. White Oak Stock Farm's White Oak Maid was placed in the lead over William C. Bain's The Dude and Mrs. Henry Martyn Alexander's Ham, which were next in order.

Only two exhibitors sent entries in the class for the best collection of harness horses. W. W. Watson showed Lord Baltimore, My Maryland, and My Maryland II., while the Paul A. Sorg entry consisted of Jim Seely, Pilgrim, and Lady Tuck. Even with the early successes of the Fairmont Farms the judges were a considerable time in reaching a decision, but the Watson horses were to remain unbeaten and won the first ribbon. The closing event, a three-furlong dash, was won by J. Osgood Nichol's Whirlwind, ridden by Casey.

BONDHOLDERS OBJECT TO SUGAR AGREEMENT

$750,000 Is Not Enough for Abandoning $30,000,000 Suit Against American Company.

EARLE ASKS INSTRUCTIONS

Receiver of Pennsylvania Company Wants Court to Say Whether He Shall Settle or Continue Suit.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, July 29.—Bondholders of the Pennsylvania Sugar Refining Company, the concern promoted by Adolph Segal, but which never turned a wheel in the production of sugar, protested vigorously before Judges Willson and Carr, in Common Pleas Court, to-day against the sanctioning of Receiver Earle's proposed settlement of his suit against the American Sugar Company. The suit was brought by Mr. Earle under the Sherman anti-trust law for $30,000,000. Under this proposal, which followed an amicable action in the New York courts, the receiver was to be paid $750,000 in cash.

The sum named was to be in settlement of litigation involving the American Company, which was to be released from all actions and claims, and it agreed to relinquish the custody of all securities. The protesting bondholders allege that the terms offered by the American Company are inadequate.

Attorney General M. Hampton Todd and Julian P. Davies of New York, representing a protective committee of bondholders of the refining company, maintained that the Pennsylvania Company's claim against the American Company would result in the recovery of a much larger sum if the case went to trial. The bondholders also wanted the court to appoint a master, so that a complete report could be made on the proposed adjustment.

Mr. Earle appeared in court with John C. Bell and Joseph De F. Junkin, counsel for the real estate trust company, of which Mr. Earle is President. Mr. Earle declared that he approved the terms of settlement as a question of business wisdom, but in view of the opposition of the bondholders he desired the court to instruct him whether he should refuse the offer made or proceed with the suit to recover the damages allowed under the Sherman act.

Mr. Earle asked the court whether he should enter into negotiations with Segal to obtain his assent and with the real estate trust company. While the various funds and securities, he said, would revert to their respective owners as fixed by the settlement, the following securities claims and funds would have to be dealt with or surrendered by some one:

The $1,250,000 note of Adolph Segal.

The claim of the Real Estate Trust Company against Kissel for $1,450,000.

One million two hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars par of the bonds of the Pennsylvania Sugar Refining Company.

Two million six hundred thousand dollars at par of the stock of the same company.

One million dollars of the bonds of the Majestic Apartment House.

Four hundred thousand dollars of the bonds of the Standard Iron Mining and Furnace Company.

This made a total of notes and securities of $7,925,000.

Mr. Earle said he felt sure that if the suit was prosecuted the recovery would be nothing like the amount offered in settlement. He said he did not want the responsibility of finally accepting the settlement without the advice of the court.

Messrs. Todd and Davies, in denying the adequacy of the settlement, said that the sum would be made less by payment of $105,000 to Gustav A. Kissel. While expressing every confidence in Mr. Earle the opposing counsel said they doubted that he, while being President of the Real Estate Trust Company which was so vitally interested in the settlement, would conserve all interests faithfully, especially as some were antagonistic to the company of which he is the head.

They declared that under the terms of the settlement the bondholders would not receive all they were entitled to, and special objection was made against the surrendering of securities against which there are disputed claims.

MAGISTRATE HOUSE 'BEAT IT.'

Stood Not on the Order of His Going When a New Policeman Tapped Him.

In impressing upon a prisoner the importance of police prevention of crowds congregating in the streets, Magistrate House, from the bench of Essex Market Court, yesterday told how he "beat it" the other day when so directed by a green bluecoat.

"It was late in the afternoon," said the Magistrate. "I was standing at the corner of Twenty-third Street and Fifth Avenue, just off Madison Square. Some sort of a parade was passing, and, being very fond of music, I tarried to listen.

"Presently I felt a tap—and it was not entirely gentle—on my shoulder from behind, and a young copper said, in a voice not devoid of gruffness: 'Say, you beat it, and beat it quick.'

"I did not stop and tell this bluecoat that I was Frederick B. House, City Magistrate, with jurisdiction over criminal matters, nor that I was the only person standing at the corner and was in no way blocking the street or causing a crowd to gather, but I simply and quickly 'beat it.'

"Now, if I can 'beat it' when a copper tells me to, I believe you can."

Magistrate House did not even take the policeman's number, but he thinks he is new on the force, for there are not many of the men who do not know all the City Magistrates.

"I believe that policeman had made many others move before he did me," continued the Magistrate, "and he did his duty when he told me to 'beat it.' The higher courts have held, and every reasonable man concedes, that with the enormous traffic on New York streets it would be impossible to expedite traffic if people were allowed to congregate in the streets."

50,000 MEN WANTED.

By Western Farmers to Harvest Their Crops.

WASHINGTON, July 27.—A cry for help to harvest the season's bounteous crops comes from the West to officials of the Department of Commerce and Labor, whose functions in part are to find employment wherever possible for the throngs of aliens who come into this country.

Fifty thousand able-bodied men are wanted, and badly, too, by the farmers of the West, according to Representative Stevens of Minnesota, who has been in conference with Assistant Secretary McHarg and other officials. He says the West is literally begging for labor to gather the big wheat and other crops.

While officials here are more than willing to assist they are powerless to do very much, because of the almost penniless condition of the thousands of aliens who annually reach American shores.

STORM IN NORTH SEA.

Many Vessels Ashore or Damaged and Some Reported Lost.

CUXHAVEN, July 29.—A heavy storm is raging in the North Sea. The Hamburg schooner Hans and a Dutch sailing vessel, name unknown, have been wrecked near Neuwerk. The German schooner Margarethe was towed into this port today in a sinking condition. Many fishing and other small craft are reported to have been lost.

HAMBURG, July 29.—The schooner Matilde of Hamburg and the brig Hoffnung of Holland have been wrecked near Damkfort. The German ship Theodora is ashore near Kolberg.

BAD METHODS HURT OUR TRADE IN EAST

Manila Business Man Says Careless Packing of American Shippers Loses Sales.

AUSTRALIANS ARE RIVALS

Filipinos Prefer Their Hams and Bacon to Those from Chicago—Our Paints Go in Wooden Kegs.

WASHINGTON, July 28.—Henry D. Woolfe, a business man in Manila, has supplied the Bureau of Manufactures of the Department of Commerce with some valuable information about American trade conditions and openings in the Philippines, which is summarized as follows:

"Unless American manufacturers, dealers, and shippers conform to the requirements of their customers here, observe strictly the orders forwarded, and not supply goods which may be substituted in the home markets, but will not sell here, the market will be lost, despite any favored clauses in the projected tariff. There is no patriotism in business. Buyers seek the best and lowest markets and where they can rely upon their orders being filled as directed. Good packing, proper attention to shipping details, forwarding of necessary documents, and finally, an extension of credit terms are vital points for the United States commercial world to consider, not only as regards the Philippines, but as it affects all Oriental trade."

In 1899, says Mr. Woolfe, the first direct importation of hardware from the United States was made by a wealthy firm of Chinese residents, whose establishment as dealers in all hardware, metals, and ship chandlery dates from 1882. This firm, having been contractors for the Spanish Government, speedily assumed and still retains a very large portion of business with the army, navy, and insular Government bureaus. Within a few years four American firms have been established in the hardware trade and are a doing a lucrative business.

Roofing of the corrugated galvanized iron type is extensively used in the islands, but all of this iron emanated from English mills until the last three years, when the United States Steel Corporation began to send its manufactures. To-day its Apollo brand bids fair to oust European makes from the market. Previous to 1898 wire nails were imported from Germany, Austria, and Belgium, but today the American nails hold sway. Mild steel bars, rods, and plates and iron in similar forms are still imported from Belgium, Germany, and England, as the quotations from these countries are reliable and guaranteed, and no concession in prices to favored buyers is given, as is the method pursued by American manufacturers.

In paints, linseed oil, turpentine, the American manufacturers are not in evidence. The American style of packing in wooden kegs is valueless in the tropics. The wood dries out and hoops become loose; causing the contents to leak out and deteriorate. On the other hand, the English factories will make colors of any percentage of purity called for, and so state on the invoices. Their packing is in sheet-iron kegs, and the loss in handling is very small.

American machine tools have won favor in spite, it is said, "of the American manufacturer's careless packing and unreliability in filling orders."

"Beyond the invasion of the market by colored prints and gray sheetings of American origin, but little progress has been made in the introduction of textile fabrics, and it seems as if no progress can be made. The demand is for cotton and cotton mixtures of a light and diaphanous type. It is very doubtful if American mills would make these articles, the looms to weave them being special and the profits too small, while, furthermore, American mill owners will not conform to the required patterns."

The American textile articles that have gained an ascendency are cotton canvas and duck, but to-day the Japanese mills at Kobe and vicinity are entering the market with a product scarcely inferior to the output of the Massachusetts mills.

In the matter of canned fruit Mr. Woolfe says the 2½-pound cans now in use by Americans are too large. A can of one pound is sufficient. The canned peaches, pears, and other fruits put up in Spain are all in small tins; their quality, flavor, and sirup are much better than those of the California products, and suit the taste of the people. The Spanish fruits in glass bottles and jars excel any like product of American origin. Vegetables canned in Switzerland, France, Spain, Germany, and even Denmark vie and compete with American products. These are canned in one-pound receptacles, and being very superior in quality, find a ready sale.

Australia also is a rival in this line. The importation of American tinned meats is increasing, but Australian hams and bacon are preferred to Chicago products. American butter is rarely imported—"because the quality sent here in the early days proved poor," and even American biscuits are not in favor. British biscuits are preferred, but even Spanish and French makes have more crispness, a fresher flavor, and better taste than any American products.

Australia is the chief and successful competitor against the United States for the flour business, and her mills have gained a strong footing.

John Morton's Problem
As It Will Be Told in The Sunday Times

THE SUNDAY TIMES will publish the opening installment of a two-part story which will describe the problem of John Morton, bachelor, and readers of The Times are invited to consider his problem and to come to his assistance. John Morton is in search of a wife. In the progress of the story he will meet many types. The reader will meet them with him, and Morton will undoubtedly appreciate the reader's assistance in making his choice. How this assistance may be given will be told in The Times next Sunday. John Morton's problem is certain to make wide appeal. The first of the two parts in which the story will be told will be published next Sunday. The readers of The Times will find it highly entertaining Summer reading, and large numbers of them should find rendering aid to John Morton a most enjoyable Summer diversion.

Also in The Times Next Sunday

Thomas A. Edison on the wonders being done by man in the air and the promise of the future——Metchnikoff, the great Russian biologist, on health and the prolongation of human life——James Creelman's narrative describing his investigations into the causes of the massacres of Christians by Moslems——An enlightening character study of Edward H. A Page of Unusual Baseball Pictures

Probably many of those who follow the fortunes of the "Giants" will find their faces on the first page of the Picture Section of The Times next Sunday. There will be a full page of these baseball photographs and they are all full of spirit and action. What the grand stand looks like—in its joy—will be one of them. Other pages of the Picture Section will carry photographs of well-known society people at Newport, interiors of the new home of John D. Rockefeller, Jr., at Pocantico Hills, most attractive pictures from the Adirondacks, a page of interesting photographs depicting scenes during the recent invocation of the relics of St. Anne, capital pictures of a flight by Bleriot, the man who flew across the English Channel, and many other attractive photographs.

BUSINESS TROUBLES

JACOB ROSTENBERG.—Jacob Rostenberg, salesman of White Plains, has filed a petition in bankruptcy with liabilities of $3,207, and no assets. He was formerly in the millinery business in this city, about a year ago.

RAHAIM & MALHAMI.—Judge Hand has appointed Ernest Stauffer, Jr., receiver in bankruptcy for Rahaim & Malhami, wholesale dealer in dry goods and notions at 74 Greenwich Street, with a bond of $2,500.

SOLOMON BEARDS.—Solomon Beards, salesman of 369 East 148th Street, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities of $5,208 and no assets. The debts were contracted in Brooklyn in 1895 and 1905, principally for glass and mantels.

G. R. SHEPARD COMPANY.—Schedules in bankruptcy of the G. R. Shepard Engineering and Construction Company of 444 Water Street show liabilities of $7,498 and assets of $8,773, consisting of machinery, $5,073; materials, $179; accounts, $3,231, and notes, $290.

MAX MOSCOVITZ.—Max Moscovitz of 210 East Fifty-sixth Street, formerly a grocer, has filed a petition in bankruptcy with liabilities of $5,283 and assets of $40 cash. Most of the debts were contracted jointly with Louis Beller. The largest creditor is Pauline Rajss, $5,093.

KOSSOFF & SCHWARTZ.—Louis Kossoff and Joseph Schwartz, who composed the firm of Kossoff & Schwartz, manufacturers of furs, formerly at 27 West Eighth Street in 1907, have filed a petition in bankruptcy with liabilities of $3,916 and assets of $1,598 in accounts.

SAMUEL FACTOR.—Samuel Factor, designer at 148 Wooster Street, has filed a petition in bankruptcy with liabilities of $6,570 and no assets. Most of the debts were contracted as a partner in the firm of Factor & Young Brothers, manufacturers of waists at 57 Walker Street, against whom a petition in bankruptcy was filed by creditors on March 25, 1905, which was closed up on April 7 last without a discharge.

MILLIKEN BROTHERS.—Judge Hough of the United States District Court has authorized the receiver of Milliken Brothers, Inc., structural iron and steel, to pay the semi-annual interest, amounting to $90,000, on the $3,000,000 first mortgage bonds of the corporation. They have paid the interest for the past two years. The readjustment committee expects to have the entire matter settled shortly, as 80 per cent. of the unsecured creditors have assented to the plan of reorganization.

SAMUEL T. AND AARON SLATER.—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against Samuel T. and Aaron Slater, who compose the firm of S. T. Slater & Brother, wholesale dealers in cloaks and suits at 10 West Eighteenth Street, by these creditors: H. B. Claflin Company, $590; M. Lowenstein & Sons, $25, and Samuel Eiseman & Co., $25. It was alleged that they are insolvent, and made preferential payments and transfers of property. Judge Hough appointed Arthur J. Cohen receiver; bond, $500. It was stated that the liabilities are $9,000 and stock $1,000; that they have abandoned their place of business and left a boy in charge. Samuel T. Slater began business fourteen years ago. On May 9 they were damaged by a fire at 15 West Eighteenth Street and the loss was adjusted at $11,400. Samuel T. Slater was reputed to own two large apartment houses, 179 to 185 East 100th Street, subject to mortgages of $105,000.

ISAAC B. NEWCOMBE.—Supreme Court Justice Bischoff appointed Stewart Browne receiver in supplementary proceedings for Isaac B. Newcombe, the former Wall Street broker, with a bond of $5,000, on application of Mr. Browne, who obtained four judgments aggregating $40,651 against Mr. Newcombe on March 23, 1906, which were returned by the Sheriff unsatisfied six days later. On March 29, 1906, a creditors' petition in bankruptcy was filed against Mr. Newcombe and his schedules showed liabilities of $640,096 and assets of $85,000. On account of the bankruptcy petition the proceedings in the Supreme Court brought by Mr. Browne were discontinued. Since then the trustee in bankruptcy has been discharged and the case was closed up on March 26, 1909, without a discharge to Mr. Newcombe, who did not apply for it. He owned a seat in the New York Stock Exchange, where he became a member in 1869. He was suspended by the Exchange for five years from May 2, 1904, and when the time expired the Exchange ordered the sale of his seat on July 8 last for $85,000, subject to liens of the members who are creditors, amounting to $77,000. It is alleged that some of those liens are invalid and the Exchange committee was to have a hearing on them yesterday. Mr. Browne was formerly a partner with Mr. Newcombe from January, 1903, to May, 1904, under the firm style of Stewart Browne & Co.

Out of Town.

BALTIMORE, July 29.—The plant of the South Baltimore Steel Car and Foundry Company was bought in by the reorganization committee of creditors yesterday for $340,000. The company will be reorganized with a capital of $1,500,000.

PULLIAM, SELF-SHOT, DIES OF HIS WOUND

President of the National Baseball League Didn't Regain Consciousness After His Act.

BASEBALL WORLD GRIEVED

Telegrams of Condolence Received from Leaders of League Teams—Funeral to be Held in Louisville.

Harry Pulliam, President of the National League of Professional Baseball Clubs, who shot himself on Wednesday night in his room in the New York Athletic Club, died yesterday morning at 7:40 o'clock without having regained consciousness.

Coroner George F. Shrady tried to get from the baseball official an explanation of his act, but Mr. Pulliam could not seem to understand what the Coroner said to him. When the Coroner asked how he came to shoot himself, all the dying man could mutter was, "Am I shot? I didn't know it."

Mr. Pulliam's suicide was a great shock to his friends in the baseball world. It had been thought that he had entirely recovered from a nervous breakdown that compelled him last Spring to give up the cares of his office, and take a long rest. Mr. Pulliam left for a trip in the West and South in February, and did not return to his office in this city to take up work again until the middle of June.

Mr. Pulliam reached his office at 9:30 o'clock on Wednesday morning and started in to go through a stack of correspondence. He was half way through when he stopped, and for a time sat at his desk, looking out of the window. At 1 o'clock in the afternoon he left the office, telling his stenographer that he did not feel well, and that he would leave for the day.

Mr. Pulliam left no word giving any explanation for his act. He appeared to have gone directly to the New York Athletic Club on leaving his office. He said nothing to any one at the clubhouse, and it was not known that he was in his room until after he had shot himself.

Telegrams were sent yesterday morning to the various National League officials informing them of Mr. Pulliam's suicide. During the day Barney Dreyfuss, President of the Pittsburg Club, who gave Mr. Pulliam his start in the National League, telephoned to the headquarters of the League, in the St. James Building, and expressed deep regret over Mr. Pulliam's death.

Charles W. Murphy, President of the Chicago Club, telegraphed the league office, asking if he could be of any service in aiding Mr. Pulliam's family.

Mr. Pulliam left the newspaper work to become Secretary of the Louisville Baseball Club, and later went to Pittsburg. He was at one time a member of the Kentucky Legislature.

Coroner Shrady was informed yesterday that Mr. Pulliam was for a time in a sanitarium in the Spring, but he was unable to learn where or how long Mr. Pulliam had been treated there.

Shortly after Mr. Pulliam's death the body was taken to an undertaking establishment at 620 Sixth Avenue. There a number of friends of Mr. Pulliam, some of them members of the New York Athletic Club, called during the afternoon.

Arrangements for the funeral will not be made until the arrival from Nashville, Tenn., of G. N. Cain, a brother-in-law of Mr. Pulliam. It is said that he will be buried in Louisville, Ky.

HEIDLER FOR PRESIDENT.

Secretary and Treasurer Likely to be Promoted by League.

Secretary and Treasurer John A. Heydler will become Acting President of the National League until Mr. Pulliam's successor is elected by the Board of Directors of the league. Mr. Heidler has been spending his vacation in the Adirondack Mountains near Lefargeville, and a telegram was sent to him yesterday telling of the tragic death of Mr. Pulliam. He is now on his way to this city.

The constitution of the National League provides that in the case of the death of the President of the league the Board of Directors shall meet within thirty days after the death of the President and elect his successor. The board consists of Barney Dreyfuss of the Pittsburg club, August Herrmann of the Cincinnati club, Charles H. Ebbets of the Brooklyn club, Charles W. Murphy of the Chicago club, and John S. C. Dovey of the Boston club.

It is generally believed among well-informed baseball men that the Board of Directors will promote Secretary and Treasurer Heidler to the Presidency of the league. Mr. Heidler has been identified with the National League for more than fifteen years in various capacities. He compiled the official records of the players for many years, and was an umpire for a few months in the late 90's, which position was distasteful to him and he resigned. When the office of President passed from Nicholas E. Young to Harry C. Pulliam on Dec. 12, 1902, Mr. Pulliam immediately appointed Mr. Heidler his secretary, which office Heidler held until the Fall meeting of the league in 1907, when he was elected Secretary and Treasurer, thus removing much of the responsibility from the shoulders of President Pulliam. During Mr. Pulliam's illness last Spring Mr. Heidler was Acting President of the league.

Mr. Heidler has proved himself such an able, faithful, and careful official that it is likely he will be elected to succeed Mr. Pulliam. He has the confidence and friendship of all the club owners, players, and persons generally connected with the sport.

Mr. Heidler is a New Yorker, his home being in the northern section of the State. Twenty years ago he went to Washington as a printer in the Government Printing Office, and later began newspaper work, which he gave up when he received his appointment from Mr. Pulliam in 1902.

In the event of the election of Mr. Heidler to the Presidency, it is probable that he will be asked to name his successor as Secretary and Treasurer.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, July 29.—The tragic death of Harry Pulliam has already caused speculation as to his successor as President of the National League.

"Garry" Herrmann, President of the Cincinnati Baseball Club, is in Yellowstone Park, and John E. Bruce, Secretary of the National Commission, is out of the city. However, others who are accredited with having inside information of baseball politics seem to think that John Heidler, Secretary of the National League, has the inside track for the League Presidency.

During the recent meeting of the National Commission in Cincinnati, when Pulliam was asked to resume his duties, it was then the general gossip here that Secretary Heidler had acquitted himself commendably in filling the Presidential post, and that if Pulliam should have to resign on account of poor health, Heidler would stand the best show of being elected his successor.

LIBRARY BUDGET $723,042.

Estimate of $125,000 Increase for Next Year to Maintain Public System.

The tentative budget estimate on the cost of running the public library system in Manhattan, the Bronx, and Richmond next year has been filed with the Board of Estimate and shows an increase of $125,000 over this year's budget. This year the appropriation was $598,310. The estimate for next year is $723,042.

The principal increases in the estimate are: $20,000 for salaries and $87,000 for books. The sum of $4,000 for an automobile and $1,300 to pay for its maintenance is also requested.

CITY BREVITIES.

James L. McLaughlin was appointed by Surveyor Clarkson yesterday Chief Clerk of the Weighing Division at $2,000 per annum, under Deputy Surveyor Parr, in place of George E. Bedell, transferred to Inspector of Customs at $5 a day, and detailed to the division of Inspectors' returns.

Preparations were started yesterday by the locals of the Cloakmakers' Union in this city, which has an aggregate membership of 25,000, for a demand on behalf of all the cloakmakers in a few weeks for a new agreement under union conditions. Shop meetings to agree on the demands to be substituted have begun.

JUST WON'T BE A CITIZEN.

Mr. Proctor of Belmar, N. J., Though Born in the United States, Objects.

Berkeley Proctor of Belmar, N. J., the young engineer who attracted some attention a few weeks ago by writing to Gov. Fort of New Jersey renouncing his American citizenship, arrived yesterday on the Panama liner Colon. Proctor has not changed his mind yet, but is angry that the Governor made his letter public.

"I am on my way to see Fort now," he said, excitedly, as he left the steamship. "Keep your eyes open and see the action, for something's going to happen quick."

The young engineer, who has been working in the Canal Zone, caused some trouble to the Inspectors who boarded the vessel. On the papers the passengers fill in is a declaration of nationality. Proctor refused to give the purser any information about himself.

When the Immigration Inspectors handed him again the blank on which is printed, "I am a citizen of the United States," he pointed excitedly to that sentence and said:

"I won't sign that, and you can't make me. I'm not a citizen."

There was a long argument on the subject, and Proctor could not explain why he could not settle the dispute by claiming allegiance elsewhere. In the end he crossed out the printed words and wrote above them with a lead pencil:

"I was born in the United States."

The only reason Proctor assigned for becoming a man without a country was that he had renounced his allegiance to the country of his birth on account of religious principle.

The peculiar actions of Mr. Proctor attracted some attention on board the steamship. He slept on a hatch cover at night in preference to his berth. The immigration officials decided he had the right to land in spite of his refusal to call himself a citizen.

MRS. MATTISON APPEALS CASE

Seeks to Have a Rehearing of Her Suit for a Divorce.

Mrs. Agnes C. Mattison, divorced wife of Richard V. Mattison, Jr., son of the so-called "Asbestos King" of Philadelphia, asked Supreme Court Justice Brady yesterday, through counsel, for a reasonable sum with which to take an appeal in her unsuccessful divorce action. Decision was reserved, but the court granted her a monthly allowance of $60 pending the action.

The wedding of the Mattisons, which was a secret one, took place in London in 1906. She was a Miss Agnes C. Cruikshanks, and her husband took her to his father's Summer home at Newport where, it is said, she was introduced as his fiancée, but he subsequently disclosed the fact that they were married. A wedding breakfast was given to the young couple by the officers on board the battleship West Virginia, out of which grew a suit for divorce, the husband getting a decree and no alimony penalty.

Counsel for Mrs. Mattison said that the husband transgressed greatly by an alleged abandonment of his wife, and held that the decree given to him by Justice Erlanger was in accord with neither the law nor the facts, and that the divorced wife was entitled, in all equity, to have her case passed upon by a higher tribunal. He alleged that she was penniless.

WOMAN'S NEW GRAFT GAME.

She Appeals to Physicians for Loans in Guise of a Stranded Actress.

Doctors along Fifty-fifth and Fifty-seventh Street on the west side are warning their brother physicians of attempts of a tall blonde woman to fleece them out of various sums of money. In this she is said to have been successful to the extent of playing on the sympathies of several physicians.

According to one of her would-be victims, she would saunter along a street and make a mental memorandum of some doctor's name seen on his office sign. Then she would go away and address an envelope with a note prepared beforehand. Then she would go to the doctor's office and deliver the note, waiting in the hall for an answer. One of these notes received by a physician yesterday was written on the note paper of a Fifty-fifth Street hotel, and read:

> My Dear Doctor: As you may remember, I am a professional. Have just arrived in town from a stranded company, and found the place I expected to go closed and everybody gone. I am absolutely penniless and, in brief, without even a place to sleep. Will you for pity's sake lend me some small sum with which I may at least tide over to-night. I can surely soon repay you. I can't hope to say how very grateful I will be—you can imagine what an awful position this is for a woman to be placed in.
>
> Awaiting your reply in all anxiety and with deepest thanks, very sincerely,
>
> CHARLOTTE CRANE.

This pitiful appeal did not draw any money, as the doctor was quite sure he had not met the woman, and he had also been told by others of similar appeals.

The company has ordered these additional cars, which will cost about $1,500,000, and expects to have them ready on the date set.

THIRD AVENUE SALE OCT. 27.

Auction of Street Railway Postponed Again by General Consent.

Judge Lacombe in the United States Circuit Court yesterday filed an order postponing the sale of the Third Avenue Railroad under the foreclosure of its consolidated mortgage of 1900 from Sept. 2, to which it was previously adjourned from May 7 until Oct. 27. The application for a postponement was concurred in by counsel for the various trust companies interested in the Third Avenue situation as trustees of mortgages, by Receiver Whitridge, by the reorganization committee of bondholders and by a stockholders' committee.

The order and accompanying papers give no reason for the postponement, but it is understood that it was sought because of the uncertainty regarding a reorganization plan.

Times's Readers Aid Some In Need.

THE TIMES received yesterday a check for $5 from "C. I. S." for Mrs. Margaret Kelly, now in St. John's Hospital, Long Island City, recovering from the effects of a period of starvation. The check was forwarded to her. The sum of $5 was also received from "Cuban Gentleman" and $2 from "E. A. R." for the family of Abraham Estrein, 1,651 Bathgate Avenue, the Bronx. This money was mailed to Mr. Estrein.

HOLD SILK MERCHANT ON BURGLARY CHARGE

Henry B. Lowenstein Alleged to Have Hired Men to Rob Him to Collect Insurance.

FOUND WITH JIMMY IN HAND

Truckmen and Man Who Stored Purloined Silks Also Arrested—Prisoners Held in $5,000 Bail Each.

Through the arrest yesterday of Henry B. Lowenstein, a Broadway silk merchant; Solomon Solomon, also a Broadway silk merchant; Milton Solomon, his brother; Jacob Goldner, a truckman, and Samuel Werner, his assistant, the police believe they have put a stop to a series of burglaries which have occurred within the last year at 648 Broadway, where Lowenstein formerly had his store.

According to the police Lowenstein reported that his store had been robbed on the night of July 23 of silks and other goods to the value of $7,000, and asked that an investigation be made. Lowenstein, according to Inspector McCafferty, was very much perturbed, and Detectives Duggan, Kinsler, and O'Farrell were assigned to the case.

They reported later to Inspector McCafferty that they had gone to 648 Broadway, where they found a number of burglary insurance agents representing the American Bonding Company of Baltimore, who were searching the house for goods that they might determine the amount of the loss. Among the effects in the store there was an old check book, which was found by the detectives, and upon examination they said they found the stub of a check made out in favor of a man known to be a burglar, for $5.

This, the detectives said, caused them to become suspicious. Further inquiry developed the fact that there had been a number of mysterious burglaries reported to the police from the same building within the last year. In fact, they found, they declared, that a virtual boycott had been declared against the building by the burglary insurance companies.

It was learned, however, that in spite of this boycott Lowenstein had obtained a burglary insurance policy about three months ago from the American Bonding Company of Baltimore.

The detectives declared that three days ago they learned that a number of bales of valuable silks and yarns were being removed from the building at 111 East Fourteenth Street, occupied by Solomon Solomon. These silks were being taken, according to the detectives, to a saloon in Lafayette Street, near Houston Street. Solomon was questioned closely about the silks by the detectives. They say he made a confession, which he later repeated to Inspector McCafferty.

Lowenstein instigated the burglarly Solomon is alleged by the detectives to have declared. Solomon said that Lowenstein had negotiated with a professional burglar to rob his store and take the goods away and hide them for a few days, after which they were to be shipped to a concern in Bangor, Penn., in which Lowenstein is interested.

When this had been accomplished, according to the story told by Solomon to Inspector McCafferty, Lowenstein was to collect his $3,000 burglary insurance from the American Company, and it was to be divided so that Lowenstein could keep $1,500, the professional burglar was to get $1,000, and Solomon was to get $500. After sufficient time had elapsed for the burglary to be forgotten the marks were to be removed from the silks and they were to be shipped back to Lowenstein in this city.

As soon as they heard this story the detectives went to 648 Broadway to arrest Lowenstein. But he was not there. They traced him to the Sinclair Building, 755 Broadway, where he had moved.

They went to the new store and saw Lowenstein. Detective O'Farrell asked Lowenstein if he had heard any news of the burglars.

"None whatever," replied Lowenstein.

"What are you doing with that burglar's jimmy in your hand?" asked the detectives, referring to a jimmy which they said Lowenstein was examining with great interest.

"Oh, I found that at the other place after the burglary," replied Lowenstein. Then the detectives arrested him, and took him to Police Headquarters. There he was confronted with Solomon, who, in Lowenstein's presence, repeated the story he had told Inspector McCafferty. Lowenstein did not say anything in reply.

Meanwhile Solomon's brother was arrested, charged with being an accomplice, and Goldner, the truckman, with Werner, his assistant, were also arrested. All five were before Magistrate Moss in the Jefferson Market Court yesterday afternoon on a short affidavit, charging them with burglary. Lowenstein was represented by counsel, who asked that bail be fixed.

"Five thousand dollars each," said Magistrate Moss.

"Don't you think that a little heavy?" asked the lawyer.

"Didn't you hear the detectives testify that there had been twelve robberies in that building in six months? Under the circumstances I think $5,000 a very reasonable bail. It stands," the Magistrate replied.

The defendants were locked up pending the arrival of bondsmen.

NOT A FRAUD, SHE SAYS.

Woman Who Gives Away Razors with Soap Defends Her Business.

Whether or not the Post Office has a right to withhold mail from a concern which advertises to throw in a safety razor with every ten-cent cake of shaving soap on the ground that such a firm is doing a fraudulent business will be argued to-day before Judge Hand in the United States Circuit Court. He signed an order yesterday on the application of Ella B. Putnam, who runs the American Soap Works, at 95 Chambers Street, directing Postmaster Morgan to show cause why he should not be restrained from withholding the complainant's mail.

The Post Office has withheld several hundred letters of the American Soap Works, marked them "fraudulent," and returned them to the senders. The plaintiff in her petition says that her business is legitimate and that she is being harmed by the interference of the Federal authorities.

CITY EASY OVER FRANCHISES.

Committee of 100 Exposes Dealings with City Interborough Railway.

In continuing its investigation of the terms of franchises granted by the city, the Committee of One Hundred has taken up the negotiations with the New York City Interborough Railway Company, and issued a statement on the matter yesterday in which it was declared that it "illustrates the carelessness or inefficiency with which such dealings are frequently conducted by the representatives of the city."

"On Dec. 7, 1907, Controller Metz accepted as a settlement in full of all claims of the city against the company for compensation for the use of its franchise an amount equal to only a little over 17 per cent. of what was actually due," reads the statement. "On July 2 of this year the Board of Estimate modified the franchise so as to reduce the amount of compensation which the company is required to pay to the city.

"Part of the consideration for this reduction was the payment by the company of all compensation owed to the city under the terms of its original franchise up to the end of 1907—that is, the payment by the company of the debt which the Controller, acting for the city, had virtually forgiven in 1907. The franchise was modified in such a way that the reduction in the amount of compensation was made to operate from the end of 1907 instead of from the time when the franchise was actually changed.

"In other words, the Controller accepted a part payment from this company in 1907 as a full payment; and the Board of Estimate afterward, in enforcing the full payment of the debt for which a part payment had been accepted by the Controller, released the company from some of its obligations to the city for the use of the franchise in the year 1908 and half of the year 1909.

"There would have been no difficulty about collecting the full amount due from the company under the original franchise, since the company had filed a bond, and the city, after securing a judgment against the company, could have deducted from this bond the amount of the payment."

WILLS $100,000 TO A FIANCEE.

George Young Leaves That Sum to His Son's Prospective Bride.

The report on the appraisal of the estate of George Young, a retired licorice manufacturer, who died on Feb. 14 last at the Beresford, 1 West Eighty-first Street, as filed with the Surrogate yesterday, shows that it is subject to a transfer tax of $23,281.

Mr. Young's gross personal estate, according to Referee Yereance's report, is $959,385, and with real estate holdings at Amityville, L. I., valued at $14,500, makes the gross real and personal, $973,885. Deductions of $16,140 for debts and executors' expenses leave the net real and personal estate $967,745.

Under the will his grandson, George Young Bauchle, gets $100,100, and Louise Moon Bauchle, a great-granddaughter, a life interest in $100,000. Florence A. Ten Eyck, whom the testator described as "the fiancée of his son George," gets $100,100. About $110,000 is bequeathed in various sums to nieces and grandnieces. The Trustees of the Masonic Hall and Asylum Fund of New York receive $100,000. The testator directed the residuary to be divided into three parts—one to go to his grandson, George Y. Bauchle; another to Florence A. Ten Eyck, and the third to the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company for the benefit of his granddaughter, Louise Moon Bauchle.

ESTATE TO BE REAPPRAISED.

Mrs. Chapin, According to Former Valuation, Left Net Personalty of $36,600.

The estate of Mrs. Grace Chapin, wife of Alfred C. Chapin, ex-Mayor of Brooklyn, who died at 24 East Fifty-sixth Street on Dec. 10, 1908, is to be reappraised. The appraisal made some time ago by H. Holden Weeks showed that her net personal estate was $36,600.

Among Mrs. Chapin's personal property was a policy in the Mutual Life Insurance Company valued at $6,849, and $2,135 cash in the Plaza Bank and Knickerbocker Trust Company. Under the will her daughter, Grace Chapin, gets $5,000, and her mother, Alice H. S. Stebbins, $2,000, and there are a number of other bequests to relatives and friends. Her husband is the residuary legatee.

Artist Minott Left $40,000.

The will of Joseph Otis Minott, painter, who died in Paris on May 14 last, was filed for probate yesterday. It directs that his estate, valued at $40,000, be divided as if he had died intestate. Under these conditions his brothers, Fred S. and William Minott of New York, will receive $8,000 each, and the same amount goes to his sister, Mary M. Brewer, and a nephew, Joseph B. Minott. Mr. Minott had lived abroad for some time prior to his death. At that time he was arranging to paint the portraits of Queen Alexandra and King Edward.

Hilda Tiffany's Estate $61,675.

The report of the appraisal of the estate of Hilda G. Tiffany, daughter of Louis C. Tiffany, Second Vice President of Tiffany & Co., who died at Saranac Lake on Sept. 14, 1908, filed with the Surrogate yesterday, shows the net personal estate to amount to $61,675. She had no real property.

HIS LOVE OUTWITS IMMIGRATION LAW

Thoms Weds the Girl He Won Abroad on the Ship Which Was to Have Deported Her.

THEN DEMANDED RELEASE

As the Wife of an American She Was Not Subject to the Immigration Laws.

Outwitting the immigration officials by marrying the young woman of his choice on the eve of her deportation, Heinrich Thoms, an American citizen, yesterday proved that love laughs at more things than locks and bars. When Thoms arrived here a few days ago on the North German Lloyd liner Grosser Kurfuerst, he was accompanied by Matilda Kuhlmann, who until she fell in love with Thoms had been employed in the Hotel Breslau, in Hanover. They found it impossible to be married in Europe, so they sailed away together to be married here.

Though they occupied separate cabins on the way across, the immigration authorities, acting on a cable from the other side, decided that the young woman was not eligible for admission to the country. Thoms protested, and offered to marry the girl in the presence of the Immigration Commissioner, but the officials were obdurate. They said the woman must go back, and that this was the final word on the subject.

It was not final for Thoms. He has lived long enough in this country not only to gather a comfortable fortune as a merchant in San Antonio, Texas, but also to become a thorough American, with the proper fighting spirit.

The Grosser Kurfuerst sailed yesterday, and as is usual in all cases, those who had arrived on the previous trip of the steamship and were under sentence of deportation were put on the steamship the evening before. To Hoboken on Wednesday evening went Thoms. He saw Capt. Rott of the steamer and was told that there was no objection to his marrying Miss Kuhlmann before she sailed away.

Ten minutes later Thoms, accompanied by Justice of the Peace Meyer of Hoboken, was on his way to the steamship. They were married in the saloon of the steamship, with Capt. Rott and some of his officers as witnesses. Following the wedding, there was a dinner. This was given by the skipper in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Thoms.

The first boat that went to Ellis Island early yesterday morning carried Thoms, with his citizenship papers, his marriage certificate, and the Justice of the Peace who had married him. To Deputy Commissioner Uhl the Texan explained that he had married Miss Kuhlmann, and that as he was an American citizen his wife was not subject to the immigration laws. He demanded her release, and there was nothing left for the officials but to cancel the order of deportation and discharge the young woman.

Then the later made another quick trip. This time it was to the steamship. The vessel sailed at 10 A. M., and it was within a very few minutes of her sailing time when Thoms got there. He was expected, and after he had served the release on Capt. Rott, who received it with a broad smile, the order was given to free the young woman.

This was done at once, and Mr. and Mrs. Thoms had the pleasure of standing arm and arm on the end of the pier to watch the vessel on which she was to have been deported sail away.

"I guess that's going some," said the happy husband, dropping into American slang, as he started with his wife to catch a train for Texas.

CALLS CADETS SNOBS.

Prof. Zueblin Thinks They Might Be Fitted for a Useful Occupation.

Special to The New York Times.

CHAUTAUQUA, N. Y., July 29.—From West Point and Annapolis the United States gets a goodly number of snobs each year, says Prof. Zueblin, the former University of Chicago man, who spoke to the Chautauqua Assembly to-day on American culture. Prof. Zueblin believes that the money spent in turning out tyro warriors, who consider themselves better than their fellows, could be much better spent in educating them technically for some useful occupation. Incidentally the smoke nuisances of New York and other large cities indicate that the business men in the cities don't know how to run their business well, he says.

"We are turning out of West Point and Annapolis a generation of snobs," said Dr. Zueblin emphatically. "These young soldiers are brought up to think themselves better than their fellows. Simply because they wear the garb of the soldier or sailor they consider themselves on a different plane from their fellow-Americans.

"These snobbish young warriors-to-be always remind me of an incident famous in German military annals. A sprightly young petty officer, whose only military service had been in the training schools and on the ballroom floor, thought he saw a chance to get off a clever quip before the ladies. So he pranced up to the General and said: 'Why, General, your uniform smells fearfully of camphor.'

"The grizzled old warrior turned on this military product of the new generation:

"'You don't know that smell, young man,' he snorted. 'That's not camphor. It's powder.'

"The same thing could be said about our West Pointers. Army life is tremendously degenerating in its influence.

"Smoke nuisance is a disgrace to a city," Prof. Zueblin continued. "It marks that city as a city with a prosperity that is [illegible] careless and wasteful management to counteract. Wherever you see smoke over a city you may know that that city is the victim of inferior business men. Modern methods make it absolutely unnecessary for any smoke to be in the air, besides being cheaper in the long run for the individual business man himself."
